Nazi Troops Sent to Syria As Wounded, London Says

Disguised Men Limp Off Trains and Steal In by Sea and Air, But British Are Ready

A German Division

By the Associated Press

London, June 4.—Nazis, bandaged like wounded soldiers and others carrying suitcases labeled with large letter Js to disguise them as Jewish refugees, were reported arriving in French-mandated Syria today as Germany continued to rush infiltrating forces into that strategic wedge of territory at the eastern end of the Mediterranean.

Germany is hurrying forces by air, sea and land to strengthen the vanguard already in Syria, said a dispatch by Reuters, British news agency, from the Syrian border.

Reuters quoted the Ankara radio tonight as saying the Germans are believed to have accumulated one division (up to 15,000 men) in Syria already.

British Hold Moral

But British quarters here declared the necessary precautions have been taken to deal with the Syrian danger.

Announcement by the Middle East command that the Mosul oil fields in northern Iraq once again are in British hands was welcomed here as improving the British position at the rear if and when trouble breaks out in Syria.

A Reuter's dispatch from the Syrian frontier said more than 12 planes, most of them fighters, are arriving daily at Syrian airports.

About 150 empty troop carriers landed on the airdrome at Rayak on Monday, the dispatch said.

The dispatch added that it was believed 400 so-called wounded who recently landed at Beirut in Lebanon from a hospital ship are members of a Nazi tank detachment which now has taken control of French armored cars and tanks which have been idle for many months.

Using False Passports

Three times weekly the Taurus Express unloads at Syrian depots batches of about 50 Nazis who have crossed Turkey with false Balkan passports, the news agency said it was reliably informed.

Under cover of darkness other Germans who have commandeered small ships and fishing vessels slip in to shore, it was said.

Although most of the Germans arriving in Syria disappear into the interior immediately, it was said three of the leading hotels at Beirut have been reserved for German use only.

Senegalese troops were reported manning the French side of the border with Palestine. They are mostly pro-British and the French have been forced to increase the number of pro-Vichy officers to the

Kaiser Dies After Whispering To His Wife, 'I Am Sinking'

Death Comes at 82; Hitler Sends Wire Of Condolences

By the Associated Press

Doorn, Holland, June 4.—The last Kaiser, Wilhelm II, the supreme war lord and commander of an imperial Germany that is no more, died today in Doorn, the Dutch village that had been his serene refuge since the defeat of his people in 1918. He was 82.

The intestinal ailment which had compelled the Kaiser to take to bed had made it necessary for a time to resort to artificial feeding, it was disclosed tonight, but subsequently he made an apparently remarkable recovery and the doctors had pronounced him out of danger before he fell into his last illness.

Suddenly the aged patient twitched his body in some unusual movement yesterday afternoon and a clot of blood entered the lungs.

"I am sinking," the former monarch whispered to his wife, Hermine. Then he fell into a coma from which he did not emerge. His strong constitution, however, fought off death throughout the night and the early morning. He died at 11:30 a. m.

The former Kaiser will be buried

U. S. 'Drafts' Half of Ships In East, Gulf

Operators Are Called On to Give Vessels For Defense Use Or to British Pool

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Maritime Commission last night called on Atlantic and Gulf Coast shipping operators to turn over half of their vessels for defense use or service in the British shipping pool.

Some 60 to 65 ships, totaling 375,000 tons, will be thrown into the democracies' war effort under the action, a commission spokesman said. Compliance with their request is assured by the Government's power to seize vessels.

Meanwhile, shipping circles in New York reported the sinking of vessels by Nazi submarines within 700 miles of Labrador, as Secretary of the Navy Knox declared that it was too early yet to determine the effectiveness of the expansion of American naval patrols in the Atlantic.

Officials in both London and Washington previously had said that the expanded American naval patrol greatly increased the protection of merchantmen carrying war goods to England.

Knox Answers Cautiously

Knox, asked about the effectiveness of the patrol, told reporters that the Germans were claiming tremendous losses from their submarine campaign while British figures were much lower. He said that the latter "have generally been right," and added that "we haven't had time yet to tell just what the results are" of the extended patrols.

As he was speaking the Associated Press quoted maritime sources in New York as saying that German U-boats had extended their operations two-thirds of the way across the Atlantic and had torpedoed four British ships in a single day about 700 miles off Labrador.

Following the Maritime Commission's announcement, committees began work on details of the diversion of half of the Atlantic and Gulf 125 ships from present routes. Some of the vessels will go into the 2,000,000-ton British shipping pool and others will be used to bring strategic raw materials to the United States.

Defense Plans Criticized

Already thrown into the pool are 50 tankers totaling about 500,000 tons and 40 intercoastal ships aggregating about 350,000 tons. Available are 24 seized foreign ships of about 470,000 tons. Other ships must be obtained from the Pacific coastal trade, the Great Lakes, and nearby American nations.

During the day, the Senate Defense Investigating Committee heard severe criticism of the defense program and indulged in some itself.

Stacy May, chief of research and statistics bureau of the OPM, told the group that the arms expenditures rate must be doubled by fall if production schedules are to be met. He said that the April outlay of $1,100,000,000 must be stepped up to $1,500,000,000 this month and $2,000,000,000 by September if the 1941-

"The Time of the Gentleman . . . Has Expired"

Rep. Edelstein Dies After Plea for Tolerance

Just Made Speech Answering Rankin

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Representative M. Michael Edelstein, New York City Democrat, fell dead in a Capitol corridor yesterday a few minutes after pleading for racial understanding in an impassioned speech on the House floor.

The 53-year-old New Yorker had taken the floor to reply to a charge by Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, that "Wall Street and a little group of our international Jewish brethren" are trying to push the United States into war.

Edelstein answered:

"I deplore the idea that any time anything happens, whether it be for a war policy or against a war policy, men in this House and outside this House attempt to use the Jews as their scapegoat. I say it is unfair and I say it is un-American."

Recognized only for a one-minute speech, Edelstein pressed on beyond his time limit, despite the rappings of Speaker Rayburn's gavel.

"We are living in a democracy," he cried. "All men are created equal, regardless of race, creed or color, and whether a man be Jew or gentile he may think what he deems fit."

Edelstein finally left the well of the House chamber after the Speaker had twice announced, "The time of the gentleman from New York has expired."

Leaving the floor, Edelstein stepped into the lobby to see a friend from the Department of Justice, Jacob N. Wasserman. He was talking to Wasserman when he collapsed. House members carried him to a black leather sofa in the reading room, where he was pronounced dead by Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol physician. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

A routine quorum call was in progress as word of Edelstein's death spread through the cloakrooms and the House chamber.

The quorum call completed, a sobered House listened to five brief speeches of eulogy, voted its traditional resolution of "profund sorrow" and adjourned. Flags over the Capitol and its office buildings were lowered to half staff.

Representative Pheiffer (Republican), of New York, in his tribute to Edelstein, said his colleague "gave his life for his country as

Strike Chief Refuses To Order Work Resumed, Storms Out Of Conference

On the Labor Front

AS THE MEDIATION BOARD brought about a delay in a midnight-scheduled strike at five Aluminum Co. plants, it was announced in Los Angeles that 9,000 workers at North American Aviation plant would quit work at 3 a. m. Page 5.

Blistering Refusal

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The Defense Mediation Board's first test of its powers under the full emergency to make binding public recommendations blew up in its face yesterday.

The head of 20,000 striking West Coast lumber workers walked out of conferences, issued a blistering refusal to order his men back to work, and charged the board with the use of "an all out, labor busting and strike breaking device . . . to bulldoze our workers . . . and mislead them with false and hysterical propaganda."

The violent denunciation was issued by O. M. Orton, president of the International Woodworkers of America (C. I. O.), whose members have been on strike in the Puget Sound area since May 9.

Crucial Challenge

Twice called here for conferences with board panels, and pestered with telegrams to "heed the board's peace proposals in the light of President Roosevelt's emergency proclamation, Orton's raging refusal was seen as the most threatening and crucial challenge in the board's three-month history.

Apprised of Orton's blast, Board Chairman C. A. Dykstra issued a terse statement recalling that the board's recommendations were unanimously agreed to by the panel, considering the case, including two C. I. O. representatives—Clinton Golden, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, and John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils—and that the recommendations were concurred in by C. I. O. President Philip Murray, "who urged their acceptance upon Mr. Orton."

Neither Dykstra nor other board officials would comment last night on the course of future board action. It was considered a virtual certainty, however, that the board would be obliged to take immediate and drastic steps—either a White House warning similar to that issued by President Wilson in World War I, which threatened to blacklist Bridgeport, Conn., munitions workers, or the taking over by the Government of more than 50 logging and milling operations in the Seattle area.

Test Case of President's Speech

The latter action, it was believed, would be an example of the sort of contingency mentioned by President Roosevelt in press conference Tuesday in discussing pending "draft property" bill. Mr. Roosevelt explained that the legislation, offered by the War Department, would empower the Government to take over defense plants shut down by strikes, and had as a purpose the maintaining of deliveries of defense articles.

That some such step was called for was considered plain not only because of the unequivocal nature of Orton's refusal, but also because the board had previously emphasized that it considered the loggers' strike a test case of the sentence

Roosevelt Asks More Offices In Arlington

Part of $4,100,000 Program Is Urged For Nearby Area

Lack of District sites for temporary office buildings has "seriously retarded" defense activities, President Roosevelt informed Congress yesterday in asking legislative authority to erect more Federal structures in Arlington County, Va.

In a letter to Speaker Rayburn, Mr. Roosevelt requested that existing law requiring $4,100,000 worth of offices for defense workers to be built within city limits be changed to read "in or near the District."

Construction of the buildings on the site of the Arlington Experimental Farms "is considered more desirable for the effective operation of defense activities," Congress was told.

The limitation on the choice of sites was written into the Fifth Supplemental Defense Appropriation Act at the insistence of Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, and others who maintained that Government buildings should be erected within the Federal city where Congress has exclusive jurisdiction.

In requesting the change, President Roosevelt transmitted to Congress recommendations of Budget Director Harold D. Smith, who declared:

"An exhaustive search for suitable locations in the District reveals the necessity of proposing the use of land at the Army War College for some of the buildings, "the Secretary of War now advises that the use of this location presents serious disadvantages to the War Department."

New Traffic Rule: Don't Open Left Door if Parked

The Commissioners yesterday adopted a new traffic regulation prohibiting drivers from opening the left door of their cars, whether parked double or at the curb, when it would "interfere with moving traffic or pedestrians."

In the case of a one-way street, the ruling would apply to the right door.

The city heads also designated four streets one-way and restricted parking on 13 other thoroughfares.

School Board Votes to Press For 1-Cent Milk

Ballou Authorized To Continue Work In That Direction

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

The Board of Education yesterday embarked upon an all out effort to obtain a 1-cent milk project to benefit needy school children.

Authorizing Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, to continue his activities in that direction, the board specified that its members may be polled on any offer which may be made by the Surplus Marketing Administration.

Thus, swift action by the board is assured. It will discontinue meetings for the summer on July 1 but if a proposition is made by the marketing administration after that date, the members will vote on it at once by mail.

Should the surplus foods agency, a unit of the Agriculture Department, act favorably before the end of the month on the public schools' request for launching of a "penny program" here, action will be taken at a regular meeting of the board.

System in New York

Dr. Ballou revealed to the School Board that last Saturday he sent O. M. Reed, dairy chief of the Surplus Marketing Administration, a tentative list of 45 elementary schools in which 1-cent milk might be initiated.

All 45 are situated where there are large concentrations of relief and submarginal income families. They have an aggregate enrollment of approximately 15,000.

The plan is to blanket all pupils of the designated schools into the penny-milk program. This is the system followed in New York City, where 500 schools are included in the low-cost scheme, and other cities where the project is being operated by the Surplus Marketing Administration.

Example Given

At present, as Dr. Ballou pointed out, 9,000 needy children are receiving a half-pint of milk free on each school day as part of the school lunch program. This is made possible by cooperation of the Board of Public Welfare, WPA, Surplus Marketing Administration and the schools.

Dr. Ballou's plan, indorsed at yesterday's board meeting, is to continue the school lunch program on the present basis and furnish bottles of milk to those pupils who are

Excess Profits Tax Suggestion Is Overriden

Committee Votes Down Treasury Plan to Base Levy on Invested Capital

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday overrode the Treasury's excess profits tax recommendations in order to retain the popular average earnings base as an optional method of computing the tax.

In the first committee showdown on the $3,500,000,000 program, members voted to continue the present optional plan of computing excess profits taxes, "with such revisions as the committee may see fit to make."

A sharp setback for the Treasury, which sought to base the tax on invested capital only, the committee's action left undetermined the amount of profits revenue to be raised from rate changes.

Members were still "shooting at" the $585,000,000 net revenue sought by the Treasury from above normal defense profits. Failure to vote any basic changes in the law's present framework still left the committee free to vote rate and credit revisions that may tap excess profits substantially as deep as the Treasuary proposed.

The committee meanwhile remained committed to the $3,500,000,000 overall tax goal originally set by Secretary of the Treasury

U. S. to Foster Billion More Steel Capacity

Defense officials have decided on a billion-dollar program to expand the Nation's steel capacity by about 10,000,000 tons a year and thereby alleviate a shortage for civilian requirements, The Post learned yesterday.

The program, which will probably be paid for largely out of Government funds, was mapped in a secret meeting Tuesday at which Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel Corporation, and Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Co., discussed the problem with John D. Biggers, OPM production chief; Leon Henderson, Federal price administrator; Jesse H. Jones, Federal loan administrator; E. D. Fuller, jr., OPM raw materials chief, and James V. Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy.

The steel executives will meet with a larger group of the industry in New York today, it was learned, and are expected to report back to the defense agencies next week on matters of financing, location, extent of possible expansion and allocation of the job among the various steel companies.

Follows Henderson Urging

The program, it was indicated, is the fruit of insistent demands by Henderson that steel capacity be expanded for civilian purposes, even at the cost of temporarily curtailing already short supplies to obtain the "seed corn" necessary for a larger steel crop in future years.

Officials in the conferences, it was learned, agreed that while the present military and British demands for steel did not exceed about 25 per cent of the nation's capacity, acceleration in the defense program would probably take a larger amount, thus intensifying a shortage for civilian purposes of 10,000,000 tons in 1942 forecast last week by OPM consultant Gano Dunn in a report on the subject to President Roosevelt.

Dunn declared in his report, and the President also remarked, that

Winant Brings Explosive Report on War Effort In Every Realm

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

John G. Winant, Ambassador to Great Britain, is presenting to President Roosevelt a full-length report on the British war experience, but the report is too full of "dynamite" to be made public, it was learned last night.

Authoritative sources disclosed that Winant, who returned here last weekend on a hurried trip from his London post, has spread before the President a complete picture of Britain's war effort in every realm—the military situation, food resources, morale of her people, ship sinkings in the submarine-infested Atlantic, even the social changes in the British Isles.

The report makes no mention of the Rudolf Hess affair, informed quarters stated.

Winant, emerging from his second long interview with the President in two days, would not say flatly what was in his report, but he did tell reporters:

"The British have made available through the Embassy to this Gov-

Rail Workers Ask Annual Pay Boost Of $500,000,000

Chicago, June 4 (U.P.).—The Nation's railroads tonight faced formal demands for a $500,000,000 annual wage increase for 1,150,000 employes.

Delegates of 14 railway labor organizations adopted unanimously today a proposal for pay gains averaging 30 to 34 cents an hour for 850,000 skilled and semiskilled workmen. The five major brotherhoods previously had asked a flat 30 per cent wage gain for their 350,000 operating trainmen.

Eklund to Offer Alibi to Prove He Was Not Sniper Girl Saw

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The athletic college man who faces the electric chair as Washington's murderous sniper will tell his own story for the first time today.

John Eugene Eklund, black-haired, close-mouthed and unsmiling, would not talk when he was arrested in connection with the death of Hylan McClaine, 17, who was the fourth man shot to death here last fall.

Eklund still had not talked when he came to trial before Justice James M. Proctor in the District Court Monday.

For three days, Eklund sat erect and silent, while the prosecutors piled up direct and circumstantial evidence in an attempt to prove that he killed McClaine, a colored boy with whom he had no quarrel. The boy's girl friend, Mildred Virginia Washington, 18, colored, swore she saw Eklund standing over the body, shooting at her. Even then, Eklund said nothing.

But today he will take the witness stand, and meet her testimony with an alibi. Defense Counsel James R. Kirkland revealed by questions yesterday that Eklund claims he was nowhere near the killing. Kirkland suggested that Eklund was in New York, at the World's Fair, the night of October 14, when McClaine was slain.

Eklund will have a further defense, which his lawyers kept a secret. They discussed it in whispers after Assistant District Attorneys John W. Fihelly and Charles B. Murray rested their case yesterday.

This surprise defense appeared to involve the four lead bullets, the star evidence for the prosecution yesterday. Two of them came from McClaine's body; two more came from a tree across the Highway Bridge, where witnesses testified they saw Eklund at pistol practice.

Two veteran firearms experts, Capt. John H. Fowler of the Metropolitan Police, and Inspector John Henry Fitzgerald, of the Colt Arms plant, Wethersfield, Conn., produced huge pictures of the bullets and showed the jurors the grooves cut in the lead by the rifling of the pis-

Letters Pour in as Search For Typical Dad Hits Stride

Washington's typical father!

Is he plump or lean, big-familied or small, old or young, rich or poor?

You'll know a week from tomorrow, when his identity will be announced. Right now The Post is searching for him via letters from its readers, nominating their respective dads for the honor and telling why he deserves it.

Has the Father's Day editor heard of your candidate yet? Every man, woman and child is eligible to file his entry. The "ideal father" of his or her choice may even be someone else's dad. Just so he has at least one son or daughter.

Letters must be postmarked no later than midnight, June 10, to be eligible for consideration. Give your nominee's name and address and tell what he's done to make you think he's the Capital's ideal dad.

The fact that June 15 is Father's Day, of course, has something to do with the contest, which is similar to the one conducted by The Post last year.

There's a heart throb in nearly every one of the early entries.

One letter which came in yesterday sang the praises of one "who has been sick for three years and

Fair Skies Forecast for D. C. Later Today as Drought Ends

Fair skies and moderate temperatures will come to Washington this afternoon—ending a week of intermittent rain—after a cloudy forenoon, the Weather Bureau predicted. Meanwhile, downpours ended the drought in many parts of the South, Middle West and East.

While yesterday's rain disrupted air traffic here, grounding 24 Washington-New York flights, it was welcomed in the agricultural areas surrounding the Capital.

Heavy rains in Prince Georges County have made it possible to transplant tobacco plants from seed beds to fields, averting a serious threat to the crop by recent dry weather, P. E. Clarke, county agent, reported.

In other sections of Maryland and Virginia the drought has likewise been broken by recent downpours but aridity persists in broad sections of the East and South, the Associated Press reported.

Meanwhile, heavy rains in Iowa, Nebraska and Pennsylvania put a finish to dry periods there. The western part of the Quaker State had suffered an extended rainless spell in the wake of the driest April since 1888.

the problem was raised of whether to meet the deficit by curtailing civilian use or whether to seek expansion.

Although Dunn devoted considerable space to arguments against the latter course, Henderson has taken the opposite view, holding that the Dunn report underestimates present and future demand, and that British and defense requirements will intensify the shortage.

Difference in Figures

As against the 67,000,000 estimated by Dunn as available for civilian needs in 1942, Henderson's office has been figuring in terms of only 36,000,000 tons.

Arguing that "you can't even run a depression on 36,000,000 tons," much less a period of rising industrial activity, Henderson demanded expansion of capacity. Other officials, agreeing that Henderson's was the responsibility for civilian supply, concurred in his choice.

Jones assured the steel industry, it was known, that the Government would cooperate in making funds available for the needed expansion. Officials believe that existing concerns will be able to handle the new construction by enlarging existing plants and facilities and thus can complete the program faster and with less expense that than if new operators are called in.

Although some of the expansion can be obtained at a cost of about $40 per ton of capacity, a large part is expected to range between $80 and $125 a ton.

10,000,000-Ton Goal

Although the exact objective is not yet determined, it is known that the goal lies in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 tons, and that the industry has been asked to make plans on this basis. The cost is estimated at between $800,000,000 and $1,000,000,000.

The program, details of which are expected to be announced within a few weeks, represents a major triumph for the so-called "expansionist" school of defense officials, who have battled since last winter for enlarged steel capacity. Their fight, at first strongly resisted by the steel industry, appeared lost when the first Dunn report, made February 28, forecast surpluses rather than deficits in steel capacity for this year and the next.

Rep. Edelstein Dies After Speech

surely as if he had died on a battlefield."

"I loved Mike Edelstein," said Representative Martin Kennedy (Democrat), of New York. "As a lawyer, he was an aggressive and able practitioner, but I doubt if he ever offended an adversary. He brought to this House a deep sympathy for and understanding of his fellow man."

"A Martyr to His Cause"

Others who spoke were Representatives Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia; Capozzoli (Democrat), of New York, and Dickstein (Democrat), of New York. Dickstein said Edelstein "died a martyr to his cause . . . after a debate where he sought to protect his people, his integrity and his Americanism."

The one-minute speech by Rankin, which prompted Edelstein's heated reply, opened with an assertion that "Wall Street and a little group of our international Jewish brethren are still attempting to harass the President of the United States and the Congress of the United States into plunging us into the European war unprepared."

Rankin, who has asserted in several recent speeches that the time is ripe for Anglo-German peace negotiations, told the House:

"These international bankers are so afraid this peace movement now going on in England, this peace movement now going on behind the lines, might take root and this catastrophe be brought to a close before they can get us into it that on yesterday they held a rally in Wall Street, and Wall Street bankers made a plea to that effect."

Rankin Refers to Rally

Rankin referred to a rally held Tuesday on the steps of the subtreasury building in New York City, where four speakers urged American entry into the war if necessary to defeat Hitler.

Edelstein replied that the Wall Street meeting "was entirely controlled by persons other than Jewish bankers."

"The fact of the matter is," he said, "that the number of Jewish bankers in the United States is infinitesimal.

"Hitler started out by speaking about 'Jewish brethren.'" Edelstein recalled. "It is becoming the play and the work of those people who want to demagogue to speak about 'Jewish brethren' and 'international bankers.' The last speaker, speaking about international bankers, coupled them with our Jewish brethren."

Native of Poland

Edelstein was brought to this country from Poland when he was 3 years old. He worked his way through night law school in New York and was admitted to the bar at the age of 21.

Active in law and politics for three decades, he was elected to the House February 6, 1940, to fill the unexpired term of the late Dr. William I. Sirovich and reelected to a full two-year term last November. He is survived by his mother and five brothers and sisters.

Funeral plans had not been completed last night. The House will be represented at the services by Representatives Kennedy, Pheiffer, Dickstein and Cullen, all of New York. The upper chamber today will name Senators Wagner and Mead to attend the rites.

in the President's Tuesday speech declaring:

"The American people expect that impartial recommendations of our Government (mediation and conciliation) services will be followed both by capital and by labor."

To this, however, Orton replied yesterday that "our 20,000 striking members" would stay out until their demands for "a decent living" were met.

"We would be derelict in our duty to them if we remained any longer in Washington," he added, "to be dictated to by Mr. Dykstra and other members of the board who are trying to bulldoze our workers and attempting to mislead them with false and hysterical statements . . .

"This is a very peculiar situation where a Government agency receives a proposition from the employer, adopts it as its own, and then, by cajolery, threats and tricky propaganda, advises the workers to take it or leave it, saying, 'If you don't take it you're not patriotic.'"

Information Withheld, he charges

He accused Dykstra of withholding the information that the Weyerhaueser Lumber Co. increased its profits 60 per cent last year and that the Long-Bell Lumber Co. "increased its profits by 43,000 per cent." He indicated that the two concerns were the largest against which the union was striking.

Seen as particularly significant, in the light of the fact that C. I. O. President Philip Murray had joined the board panel's back-to-work appeal, and in the light of persistent rumors of a deep split on strike policy between Murray on the one hand and former C. I. O. President John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. left wing on the other, was Orton's further comment:

"In conformity with honest union practice, we will follow in this strike the course adopted by John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers Union."

Asked to Reconsider Refusal

Orton's declaration followed two days of conference with the board panel. The members sought to have him reconsider his refusal made two weeks ago, and subsequent refusal of the strikers themselves, to go back to work under a proposal calling for wage increases of 7½ cents an hour, vacation allowances and the creation of an impartial fact-finding commission to report on the industry. The settlement also proposed that if subsequent wage and monetary adjustments seemed equitable in the light of the commission's findings, these would be made retroactive.

Although employers indicated their agreement, Orton subsequently wired the board that the union representatives had rejected it. The board followed with a wire on May 29 urging a reconsideration in the light of the President's emergency proclamation and asking that the proposal be submitted not alone to union representatives but to all members.

Orton telegraphed a reply deemed equivocal by the board, which again requested resubmission of the proposal. Following further telegraphic communication, Orton and his associates were asked to return here for meetings which took place Tuesday and yesterday.

Situation "Quite Unsatisfactory"

Unaware that even at that moment Orton was releasing his statement from another part of the city, Dykstra held an impromptu press conference following the conclusion of the meeting. He gave reporters no indication of Orton's virulent attitude and said he understood that Orton had promised to return to Seattle and report on the two days of discussion. The chairman added that he knew Orton would not recommend acceptance of the board proposal, but had indicated he would resubmit it "without recommendations."

Dykstra admitted that the situation was "quite unsatisfactory" and that in a report he was preparing to make to the full panel and the board today he could not "give them very much comfort."

Immediately after the press conference, Orton's statement appeared. In it, he challenged Dykstra to go to Seattle and present the proposal in person to the workers. The board's recommended settlement, he added, "makes a mockery" of collective bargaining, whereas the union demand for "decent living" on the other hand, "is real national defense, Mr. Dykstra, phoney propaganda and bulldozing to the contrary notwithstanding."

Treasury Profits Tax Plan Overridden

Morgenthau. It's next job is to determine how to distribute the heavy new tax load among defense profits, corporation taxes, individual income and estate taxes and excises. Individual income taxes were put first on today's agenda, with the Treasury angling to prevent an upset in proposed steep surtaxes on all taxable individual earnings.

The Treasury's plan to compute excess profits taxes only on a ratio of profits to invested capital, followed in effect a formula rejected by Congress a year ago. In once again turning thumbs down, the committee's (unofficial) vote was 19 to 5.

Action Tentative

Previously Ways and Means committeemen agreed that "where excise taxes are increased or new excise taxes are imposed, that a floor stock tax be also imposed." This action was designed to reach taxable commodities stocked by retailers, jobbers and manufacturers, in advance of the imposition of the new excises. The proposed floor stock taxes, it was said, will be at the same rate as the proposed excises.

Chairman Doughton said both actions of the committee were "tentative."

Optional provisions of the present excess profits tax law, the framework of which the committee retained, give the taxpayer the choice of paying excess levies on profits above 95 per cent of average (1936-39) earnings, or on profits in excess of 8 per cent of invested capital. Present law rates range from 25 per cent on the first $20,000 excess to 50 per cent on all excess profits over $500,000.

Popular With Small Business

The average earnings option was popular with small business men. Out of 5,500 early excess profits returns for 1940, 4,210 were filed by corporations with excess profits of no more than $20,000. Of these approximately two-thirds used the average earnings plan, retained by the committee.

The rejected Treasury proposal confined taxpayers to the invested capital plan under a sliding scale formula, allowing as credit up to 10 per cent of earnings on current invested capital. Rates ranged from 33 per cent on excess profits net income up to 15 per cent of invested capital to 65 per cent on profits in excess of 30 per cent of invested capital.

For an excess profits tax substitute that will produce as much revenue, but still give taxpayers an option, the committee was having estimates prepared on a number of present law variations, stiffening rates and lowering exemption percentages.

Under study was a reduction of the present 95 per cent credit, under the average earnings plan, to 75 or 80 per cent, and a lowering of the exemption under the invested capital method from a return of 8 per cent to a return of 6 per cent.

Income Surtaxes Face Fight

The committee is expected to approve other portions of the Treasury's comprehensive $1,096,000,000 corporation tax program, imposing a new 6 per cent surtax on corporation income over and above the present 24 per cent normal rate.

But Administration recommendations for stiff surtaxes on individual incomes, starting the proposed levies at 11 per cent on the first dollar of taxable earnings, faced heavy firing in the committee today.

Both the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue and Marriner Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve Board, have recommended a lighter scale of surtaxes on the lower taxable incomes.

Eccles and some members of the committee have proposed broadening of the base through a lowering of individual exemptions, to which the Treasury is opposed. One plan to be advanced in committee would lower exemptions for married persons from $2,000 to $1,800, but increase the credit for dependents from $400 to $500. No proposals are pending to lower the exemption for single persons below the present $800.

Moving Out of Fort Meade Mud, Men of 44th Head for District

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Md., June 4.—At midnight in a driving rain, 18,000 men of the Forty-fourth Division began moving south from here in a race for the crossings of the Rappahannock River.

They lifted themselves from deepening mud, folded soggy pup tents and clambered into trucks whose covered-wagon tops had resigned in the effort to keep out the rain. Sleepy and tired from a day and a night on the road and an all but sleepless day here in the mud, men of the division began to taste the bitter flavor of war's hardships.

At 4:45 a. m. tomorrow the first elements of one column of the division, stretched out along Highway No. 1, were scheduled to reach the District Line on Bladensburg Road. There they were to be met by a police escort and rushed through the city by the truck route, down New York Avenue, Third Street and Maryland Avenue, in waves of 30 trucks 4 minutes apart.

The second serial, composed of the the Eighty-seventh combat team, two regiments of Infantry and a regiment of Field Artillery, was to reach the District Line about 6 a. m. and be clear of the District by 7.

Two other columns, one leaving here at midnight, the other at 2:15 a. m., were to go southward by Upper Marlboro, La Plata and the Morgantown Bridge. A last minute shift in plans, by which half of the division instead of only one brigade was to go through Washington was caused by a decision that trucks would have to cross the big Potomac River Bridge 400 yards apart, instead of the customary 100 yards.

Once across the Potomac, the two elements of the division will converge somewhere southeast of Fredericksburg, Va., where the infantry will leave their trucks and march 12 miles to their bivouacs on foot. Arrived at their destinations, they will enter concealed bivouacs.

Some time in the early light of Friday morning, the division will move southward, probably by three main roads, toward a small but heavily armed and highly mobile force of regulars. They should collide somewhere in the vicinity of Mica and New London, made ghost towns by the Government's purchase of 70,000 acres of Caroline County, Va., land for maneuvers.

The Twenty-ninth Division, former District, Virginia and Maryland National Guardsmen, will furnish 42 officers to serve as umpires for the two-day battle. District officers among them are Maj. R. S. Childs, 104th Quartermaster Regiment; Capt. William F. Jorgensen, 121st Engineers, and Capt. William J. Burd, 121st Engineers.

Defense Council Backs National Daylight Time

Norfolk, Va., June 4 (AP).—The Hampton Roads Regional Defense Council went on record today as favoring adoption of daylight saving time on a Nation-wide scale after hearing indorsement of the idea by officials of the Norfolk Navy Yard, Fort Monroe and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co.

It also voted to refer to the State Defense Council reports of a so-called "whispering campaign" which was said to be hindering enrollment here of volunteers for the Virginia Aircraft Warning Service.

The council called upon President Roosevelt to proclaim daylight saving time for the whole country. It reviewed what some of the meeting termed "legal impediments to the adoption of the plan" on a local scale only and agreed that a national proclamation would be best.

Many Killed In Nazi-Greek Clash Near Athens

London, June 4 (AP).—Fighting broke out between Greek and German soldiers at Levadia, about 60 miles northwest of Athens, when inhabitants seized a supply train, the British news agency, Reuters, tonight reported from Cairo.

German police fired on the Greeks who were unloading the train despite threats and many persons were killed and wounded, Reuters said it had been reliably informed.

After the incident, the German local commander issued a warning that anyone approaching warehouses or goods trains would be shot. Emergency measures in Athens, the report said, had resulted in court martial and death sentence for hundreds of citizens.

Dakar's Chief Goes to Vichy For Parleys

By the Associated Press

Vichy, June 4.—Pierre Boisson, the "defender of Dakar," arrived in Vichy tonight presumably to join in conferences of high import to the defense of the French Empire.

Gen. Maxime Weygand, generalissimo of North Africa, is still here.

It was Boisson, governor-general of French West Africa, who declared, "France has confided Dakar to me. I will defend it to the end," when "Free French" forces of Gen. Charles DeGaulle, supported by British warships, appeared before the port last year and demanded its surrender.

For his successful defense he won a personal citation from Chief of State Petain.

Boisson's arrival was as unexpected as was that of Gen. Weygand by plane last Monday for several important conferences with Petain.

Vichy Officially Accuses Britain

Vichy, June 4 (U.P.).—The Petain government tonight officially accused Britain of preparing a "plan of action" against Syria where French desert defenses, strengthened with consent of the Axis, were said to be strong enough to hurl back any attempted invasion.

The government statement was issued after United States Ambassador William D. Leahy conferred with Marshal Petain, and asked a definite statement on France's new "collaboration" with Germany and the rising French-British tension.

Indicating the nature of questions which Leahy may have put to Marshal Petain, an official denial of British reports that German U-boats already have arrived at Dakar on the French West African Coast was issued tonight.

President Roosevelt recently warned that any German occupation of Dakar, a hopping-off point for the American continent, would be regarded as an open "menace" to American security calling for United States action.

Deny Bases Surrendered

The French denial asserted no German submarines are to be found at Dakar or any other French naval bases except along the German-held coast of continental France.

Earlier in the day the Vichy government, repeating its earlier claims that Marshal Petain refuses to make military concessions "to any power," had denied a British press and radio accusation that France has turned over six vital naval bases for joint use of the French and German navies.

The British reports had said that German naval forces, under a secret agreement, had been given the right to use Dakar, Casablanca, Beirut, Algiers, Villefranche and Sete.

Leahy in his conference with the 85-year-old Marshal Petin today was said to have sought an explanation of decisions on a plan of "empire defense" taken in ministerial consultations yesterday and in conferences among Marshal Petain, Vice Premier Admiral Darlan and Gen. Weygand.

Deny Nazi Aid Asked

Today's French official statements said that France has not only retained full sovereignty over her defense posts such as Dakar and Tunisia but has not sought any German and Italian aid in defending Syria where any British invasion will be met by French forces "single handedly."

The official government agency in its statement tonight referred to the previously-denied British allegations of the landing of German mechanized troops at the Syrian port of Latakia, 65 miles east of British Cyprus, and said angrily:

"This new lying accusation adds to the already long series of inventions and allegations broadcast by the British propaganda service.

"It is part of a campaign which French public opinion has no difficulty in recognizing as intended to furnish justification in anticipation of a plan of action against France."

Army to Emulate Germans And Put Hangars Underground

Gov. Swope Tells Of Decision Taken In Puerto Rico

GUY J. SWOPE

The Army finally has decided to emulate the Germans and build underground hangars for its planes in Puerto Rico.

Guy J. Swope, Governor of Puerto Rico, who arrived here yesterday, told reporters about the Army's decision. He said that hangars, fuel tanks and machine shops were to be placed underground wherever possible.

The Army is building one huge air base in Puerto Rico at Punta Borinquen, and seven auxiliary fields. A Washington Post reporter who visited the island last October noticed that the first hangars at Borinquen were above ground, towering structures that would offer a juicy target for enemy bombers. When he asked why they were not being placed underground, he was told that this involved a great deal of work and expense, and that Uncle Sam was not able to conscript cheap labor like Hitler.

Congressional committees have frequently asked why the Army and Navy insisted on building hangars above ground in view of the German practice of putting them underground. Now, in Puerto Rico at least, the Army appears to have decided on the new policy.

Puerto Ricans Rush to Join Up

Gov. Swope said that Puerto Ricans were rushing to join the Army, not waiting for the draft. Of the 10,000 thus far called in the draft, he said, all but 94 previously had volunteered.

"You have to put up bars to keep them out of the Army," Gov Swope said. "It is true, of course, that the Army pay of $21 a month is a factor. But these Puerto Rican boys are truly patriotic and they are very proud to wear the uniform.

"The Army officers tell me that they react well to discipline and make very fine soldiers."

Gov. Swope said that great progress is being made in converting Puerto Rico into America's most important base in the Caribbean. He said he could not cite figures, but he told how one morning, as he was lying in bed at his Fortaleza palace in San Juan, an armada of planes droned overhead in a steady procession for more than an hour.

Navy Base Almost Ready

The Navy's air base at Isla Grande, he said, would be completed next month, a full year ahead of schedule. Nearby will be a dry dock which will be able to take care of warships up to and including cruisers.

Gov. Swope said that a battery of 12-inch guns soon will be installed on Cabritas Island, just off El Morro, the old Spanish fort in San Juan.

Tom Ferris, director of the Puerto Rican News Bureau, who came here with Gov. Swope, no longer refers to Puerto Rico as the "Gibraltar of the Caribbean." With Britain's original Gibraltar in danger, Ferris apparently has decided that the word, a synonym for impregnability, may some day cause embarrassment. So he now refers to Puerto Rico as "The Sentinel of the Caribbean."

Army and Navy Act Swiftly To Thwart Defense Sabotage

Sped by recent sabotage efforts aimed at national defense, Government machinery moved swiftly yesterday to provide greater protection for arms plants.

The War Department announced establishment of a special force of plant protection inspectors charged with supervising the safeguarding of some 43,000 defense factories against sabotage, espionage and fire.

At the same time, the Senate Naval Affairs Committee approved a bill authorizing a special Navy civilian police force to guard navy yards against spies and saboteurs.

The committee also indorsed legislation making it a crime for anyone to make photographs or sketches of naval yards, stations, ships or material. After Secretary Knox said that Japanese agents were taking such pictures.

Contracts to Be Secret

Knox, in another action, ordered that the Navy Department discontinue public announcement of the award of orders to Navy contractors. He said that such action was taken "in the interests of security."

The Navy Secretary appeared before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee to testify behind closed doors in favor of the two bills. He told reporters afterwards that the measure imposing a fine of $500 and six months' imprisonment on persons taking pictures of naval stations or equipment was "really very mild."

"It's necessary," he added. "Pictures innocently taken might be used by an unfriendly power."

A reporter suggested that the measure might curb some Japanese picture takers.

"They are taking pictures right now," Knox said.

The new Army Plant Protection Inspection Service will consist of some 800 Reserve and retired officers and civilians. Civil service examinations for the latter will be announced shortly aimed at securing men qualified in insurance inspection or as industrial engineers.

Operating under the Office of the Undersecretary of War, through the 21 Army procurement districts, the new force will see to it that arms plants contain adequate guard forces, fire protection, and a system of investigation and identification of employes and visitors to keep out spies and saboteurs.

In approving the legislation authorizing a civilian Navy police force, the Senate committee cut the authorized cost of the unit from $3,000,000 to $1,500,000. It would operate as a plainclothes force, supplementing Marine guards at yards and stations.

Ship Movements Censored

Secretary Knox's orders against further announcement of Navy contract awards follows similar censorship of movements of ships, aircraft and personnel. He has asked the voluntary cooperation of the press and radio in not publishing information of this character.

The Army still publishes movements of troops within the United States—though not to overseas garrisons—and continues the daily publication of contracts and transfers of officers.

The Navy announcement said that despite the ban on publication of contract awards, persons "having legitimate business" with the department may still obtain data regarding the contracts by calling at the bureaus awarding orders.

Britain Lightly Attacked After Boulogne Raid

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), June 5.—German planes scattered bombs over wide sections of the west Midlands early today in an attack which was termed "simply a nuisance raid" by the British.

Fire and high explosive bombs were dropped on five towns and country districts of the Midlands. Three German planes were shot down.

London had its twenty-fourth consecutive bombless night, but a few incendiary bombs were released just outside the London area.

Some property was destroyed in the Midlands and there were a few casualties, but incendiary fires were speedily extinguished.

The raiders also were reported over the northwest, East Anglia, and the northeast.

Boulogne Attacked

The German raid followed a heavy British attack on Boulogne, across the Channel.

Authoritative sources said British fighter planes shot down two Messerschmitts, and lost one plane, in sharp daylight fighting which continued on into the night as German formations struck at the British coast.

Several times during the day the rumble of loud explosions was heard across the mist-covered Dover Straits. Almost continuous explosions were heard for a time from the Boulogne region and the ground was shaken on the British side.

Earlier the air ministry reported that British coastal command bombers had attacked the German-occupied port of Le Havre and an airdrome near Cherbourg yesterday.

Dogfights 5 Miles Up

As darkness fell tonight anti-aircraft guns opened fire and British Spitfire fighter planes took the air when several small formations of high-flying German fighters crossed Dover Straits and attempted to cross Kent above a covering cloud.

Several sharp encounters ensued, 5 miles up. After one duel a German fighter was seen streaking back across the sea, smoke pouring from its tail.

The ministers of air and home security announced that an enemy plane bombed the northeast coast of Scotland this afternoon "and machine-gunned other points nearby, causing some damage and injuring a small number of people."

It was announced also that three enemy bombers were shot down last night.

Nomura Calls Relations Difficult

New York, June 4.—Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, Japanese Ambassador, speaking tonight at a dinner in his honor at the Waldorf-Astoria, admitted that relations between the United States and his country now presented "difficult problems" but declared that "between America and Japan the way of peace is the only way."

Admiral Nomura expressed confidence that American and Japanese statesmen would be able to find a peaceful solution to the problems which have strained affairs between the United States and Japan.

OPM to Urge Shift To Daylight Time

Copyright by New York Times

The Office of Production Management was reported yesterday to be ready to recommend daylight saving time for the entire Nation to conserve electricity needed for national defense production.

The OPM has been asked to report to Congress on a pending bill which would establish daylight saving time throughout the country, and it was understood that many officials of the defense organization feel such a step would be desirable.

They were said to be impressed with the experience of the United States with such a system in the last war, and with that of Canada in the present conflict.

Syria Called 'Nazi Occupied' By Egyptians

By the Associated Press

Cairo, June 4.—Egypt listed Syria as "German-occupied territory" and broke off all trade and other relations with that uneasy French mandate today soon after the Egyptian cabinet resigned.

The cabinet resignation under pressure for a government of wider base "in view of the present grave circumstances" came apparently as an urgent measure forced by the approach of Axis forces from across the Mediterranean.

Egypt's present status is ostensibly that of nonbelligerent ally of Great Britain.

It was understood that a new government intended to meet that demand would be formed tomorrow under the same premier, Hussein Sirry Pasha, probably bringing in the Saadist Party.

The cabinet resigned after meeting under the premier, who previously had called in the leaders of all Egyptian political parties. These moves followed presentation to King Farouk of a petition requesting formation of a national government "in view of the present grave circumstances."

Efforts to form such a government failed three weeks ago when the Wafd (Nationalist) Party insisted that the Chamber of Deputies be dissolved first. It has only a small representation there.

The new effort underscored Egyptian feeling that the war is getting closer than ever. The Italians advanced last fall as far as Sidi Barrani, in the western desert, before the British drove them back across Cirenaica, but the Egyptians always expressed confidence that the British could handle the Italians. They fear that the Germans who have joined the Italians in a new drive toward Suez will not be so easy.

The Egyptian government took a series of measures improving the air-raid precaution service, especially in Cairo, and took steps against possible fifth column activities, including the closing down by military order of 18 small printing presses.

Nazi Mop-up On Crete Nets 10,000 British

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 4.—Reported French measures to protect Syria from the British, announcement of the capture of further prisoners on Crete, and indications that German planes now have the sea lanes to Egypt under patrol kept attention focused on the Near East tonight.

An authorized German spokesman declined to comment on the nature of the French Syrian defenses, but he asserted the British bombings of that French mandate constituted "positive aggression" which justified a French defense.

The news agency D. N. B. said 2,000 more British prisoners had been captured in mopping-up operations in Crete, bringing to 10,000 the number of British captives. A high command communique earlier had announced the capture of more than 8,000 Britons and 4,000 Greeks and authorized sources placed the total of Allied captives at 25,000.

The German radio said 5,000 British and Greek troops had been killed in Crete.

It also was announced that military courts are being established to try civilians and military prisoners accused of mistreating German parachutists.

The new air bases on Crete apparently are being used by the Germans to keep sharp watch on the seas around Egypt.

The high command said a transport had been sunk at Tobruk, Libya, where a British garrison is besieged, and German sources said two merchantmen headed for that port also were hit by air bombs.

At the Egyptian border village of Salum, in German hands, Nazis reported wreckage of the 3,400-ton British steamer Helka had been washed ashore and that presumably air bombs had sunk the ship.

A single German plane was credited with setting fire to a British transport en route to Alexandria, and Germans said their bombers also made another "successful" raid on Malta.

In the western war theater, the high command said that Hull, England, was the principal objective of overnight air raids, and that German planes sank a 4,000-ton merchantman off the Orkney Islands, damaged two off Scotland, and hit a large British warship with two aerial torpedoes.

$250,000 Drive To Aid Service Men Is Launched

The drive to raise $250,000 in Washington to provide visiting service men with recreational facilities and clubhouses got off to a flying start yesterday, according to advices at the United Service Organizations for National Defense, Inc.

Governmental solicitation was started at 10 a. m. at the Department of Agriculture when Lieut. William Exton, United States Navy, addressed more than 500 key men and women. He stressed the importance of boosting the morale of service men by providing them with ample recreation facilities while on weekend leaves.

Lieut. Exton will speak today at the State Department to a similar group of key persons.

June 20 has been set as the campaign deadline. Of the total amount to be raised, $105,000 will be distributed to nine local organizations for immediate defense use. The balance will go toward the national goal of $10,765,000.

Special Census To Aid Solution Of Defense Shifts

A special census, to assist in solution of problems owing to a sharp population rise due to the defense program, is planned by the Census Bureau, it was announced yesterday.

The population count, if undertaken, will take place this month and will be financed by WPA funds. The Census Bureau has no funds available for the purpose.

The special count would take in Alexandria, Arlington and parts of Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, including Falls Church, Vienna, Bethesda, Chevy Chase, Rockville, Kensington, Silver Spring, Takoma Park, Hyattsville, Riverdale, Cottage City, College Park, Bladensburg, Mount Rainier, Bowie and Greenbelt.

The special census will not be a house-to-house canvass, as was the decennial count. It will be a 10 per cent sample census, with coverage distributed sufficiently widely to be representative.

Making Tires from GAS

THE basic material used in manufacturing "Chemigum," Goodyear's trade-mark for its new synthetic rubber, is butadiene — a gaseous by-product of America's great oil industry. Chemigum is superior to natural rubber in toughness, in resistance to both abrasion and oil. Its commercial production by Goodyear assures the nation of a tested process from which may be provided an unfailing rubber supply in any eventuality.

Kaiser Dies, To Be Buried In Holland

children—will perform the Lutheran burial rites.

Among the messages of condolences arriving tonight from all parts of the world were those of the Kings of Denmark and Sweden.

Adolph Hitler, who was an humble corporal in the Kaiser's army during the World War, telegraphed his condolences.

Until Monday, when the body will be brought in a casket to the little chapel on the Hohenzollern estate, the dead Emperor will lie in the bed where he died, dressed in a gray field marshal's uniform of the Garde du Corps Regiment, his hands folded.

A great cross of forget-me-nots lay on the bedspread covering the feet, the room fragant with lilacs, which now are in full bloom in Doorn.

It was understood that Arthur Seyss-Inquart, the Nazi commissioner to the Netherlands, will represent Hitler at the funeral.

In Berlin the flag of the Hohenzollerns—a Black Iron Cross against a white field with the Royal Prussian arms in gold in the center and topped by a crown of gold—waved at half-staff above the Administration Building of the Hohenzollern family and from the palace of Wilhelm I. It appeared, too, above the castle of the Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm at Potsdam.

Of guilt of causing the long and bloody contest of 1914-1918, said the German press, he had been absolved, but the authoritative commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland declared that he, nevertheless, had "carried a great deal of responsibility" for Germany's defeat. For, it was added, at a time of crisis the German people "had to leave full power and far-reaching decisions to a weak stomach."

The old Kaiser, whose death followed by years those of Woodrow Wilson and Georges Clemenceau and left David Lloyd George of England the lone survivor among the four men who had walked with destiny a generation ago, was surrounded at the end by the members of his family.

With him besides his second wife, Princess Hermine—the first empress having died in 1921, were his daughter, the Duchess of Brunswick; his grandsons, Louis Ferdinand, Karl, Franz Joseph, and Franz Joseph's wife, the Princess Henrietta.

Absent was the Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm—he had departed last week when it appeared that his father was rallying. Three other members of the family, all grandsons, had fallen with the German armies in the present war.

The crown prince succeeds to control of the fortune of the family, which still is the largest landholder in the Reich despite the fact that large sections of its estates have been turned over to settlers in Hitler's back-to-the-farm movement.

The former Kaiser himself, who had lived out his last days in an estate guarded by German soldiers replacing the Dutch guards after the conquest of Holland last spring, declined an offer to return to Germany after that conquest.

His life at Doorn had been much that of any retired and wealthy squire—there was a routine, sometimes disturbed by illness, for breakfast, for wood-chopping, for tea, for correspondence, for lunch, nap, tea again, a walk, dinner—but since the outbreak of the new war his engrossing interest had been the German campaigns.

These he followed with a solemn and fixed interest—a ruler who ruled no more, a high commander with nothing to command. With maps and flags he marked the progress of German soldiers; he kept a meticulous index of naval and merchant ship losses.

In his exile he had promised Holland's government that he would have no part in politics, and so his tremendous correspondence was confined to historical discussions and the like.

His wood-chopping he made an annual charity, distributing each Christmas to the poor the proceeds of his year with the ax.

He was born on January 27, 1859, and succeeded to the throne on June 15, 1888, upon the death of Friederich I, his father, who had ruled only 99 days.

In 1890 he took over personal charge of the German government in a historic break with the Iron Chancellor Bismarck.

On November 9, 1918, told by his generals that defeat was at hand, he abdicated and fled by automobile to Amerongen, the Netherlands, and a year later went to Doorn.

[Arriving at the frontier with a few faithful officers, the United Press recalls, the party was halted by a young Dutch sergeant, who stammered that they would have to surrender their arms, whereupon one of the officers exploded:

["What! The Emperor of Germany, Wilhelm II, hand over his sword to a common sergeant of a foreign army? Never! Impossible! The Emperor of Germany will only deal with a general."

[Finally a general was summoned and the Kaiser gave up his sword.]

Beirut Bombed Again

Beirut, June 4 (U.P.)—British bombers staging their second attack in two days on this capital of French Syria today blasted and set afire gasoline storage facilities near the harbor area while French antiaircraft batteries hurled up a heavy barrage.

The heavy attacks, climaxing two weeks of British bombings of Syrian air fields, followed a new warning yesterday by French High Commissioner Gen. Henri Dentz who, denying reports of the arrival of German mechanized troops in Syria, accused the British of "seeking a pretext" for an invasion.

The British planes droned over Beirut for more than a quarter of an hour.

Cairo, June 4.—British air-borne ground troops have occupied Mosul, thus assuring control of the vitally-important Mosul oil fields, according to information released here today.

Iraqi Petroleum Co. employes are resuming their normal posts and oil is expected to be flowing through the Kirkuk-Haifa pipe line. Informed sources said the pipe line suffered only minor damage at the hands of the Iraqi insurgents.

The British used air transport, as the most feasible means of moving troops northward to the Mosul region, but did not execute attacks similar to those of the Germans on Crete.

The Iraqi government declared martial law on Tuesday after riots Monday in Bagdad which were characterized by officials as a last effort by supporters of Rashid Ali El-Gailani.

Istanbul, June 4 (U.P.).—Travelers from Syria estimated today that about 2,500 French soldiers accompanied Col. Phillbert Collet when he fled from Syria last month to join the Free French Forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle across the frontier in Palestine.

Winant Brings British Data of 'Great Military Value' to U.S.

ernment their war experience.

"That experience is of great military value in preparing this nation to defend democracy."

The silent Vermont diplomat indicated the highly explosive nature of his report by telling newsmen:

"There is hesitancy when a country is at war to make public statements that might be of danger to their (British) fighting forces."

Until he left the President's office yesterday Winant had made no public statement on his trip here other than to quash rumors that it was connected with peace efforts and to pay tribute to British morale.

Questioned in the lobby of the White House executive offices, the tall, dark New Englander looked for minutes at the floor, obviously weighing each word with great care. Then, after a long silence, he slowly made this statement:

"Some people feel we don't get as much information as we would like from England.

"It's easy to understand, however, that there is hesitancy when a country is at war to make public statements that might be of danger to their fighting forces.

"At the same time it is natural that we as a people want to get as much information on the situation as possible.

"I would like to say that the British have made available through the Embassy to the Government their war experience.

"That experience is of great military value in preparing this Nation to defend democracy."

Later it was learned that Winant's report to the President contains this information as relayed to him and as gathered by American military observers.

No Recommendations

When the Ambassador was asked concerning reports that he had brought the President a warning that Britain would collapse unless this country actively enters the war, Winant unsmilingly commented:

"Some of the questions that have come up very apparently have come out of Berlin."

Though Winant refused to discuss the actual contents of his report, it was understood that he made no recommendations to the President. Winant, it was believed, is giving the President a factual picture of the British situation, leaving Mr. Roosevelt to draw his own conclusions.

There has been no direct indication either from the President or from Winant what those conclusions are, but it has been persistently reported since Winant landed that he believes it essential that more American aid reach Britain.

To See President Again

Secretary of State Hull, who saw Winant Tuesday, said frankly yesterday that they discussed the state of international danger to the United States.

Hull disclosed that he and Winant spent much time going over American policy generally as it relates to the international situation.

Winant has scheduled another conference with the President Friday and plans to see William S. Knudsen, defense production chief; War Secretary Stimson, Navy Secretary Knox, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, Vice President Wallace and other top officials of the defense drive, before leaving for London "in a few days."

Second Army Rests at End Of Big 'Battle'

With the Army in Tennessee, June 4.—A little worn but still fit, 35,000 soldiers of the Second Army came to the end of the first major field problem tonight, got chow under trees, crept into pup tents en joyed a night's rest.

They ate and slept where the "battle" of the last two days stopped. With thousands of trucks and the complex fighting equipment of a modern army, soldiers of the Fifth, Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions had ranged over an area about 25 miles long and 15 miles wide atop the rolling Cumberland plateau in the initial episode of the month-long war games in central Tennessee.

At the end of the day there were no war showers of the training camps. A bath meant a dip in some nearby stream or in a friendly farmer's barn trough. There was food, but it was plain, wholesome fare from a mess pan. Some restaurants in hamlets of the maneuver area had to close because soldiers bought them out. Eating was the principal diversion during the rest in the field.

"These men are beginning to be well seasoned," a member of the Second Army surgeons' staff said. "We've had only about 300 out of the three divisions sent to the field hospitals. Most of the illness has been the kind that would keep a civilian home from his job for a day or so."

With all the wide movement of motorized divisions—the smallest containing 14,000 men and 1,400 trucks—in a 45-mile northwestward sweep to meet a simulated enemy, there has not been a serious accident since the maneuvers began Monday, the officer said.

The cool weather and frequent showers favored the soldiers as they carried through the mission of securing the northern rim of the Cumberland plateau.

The "battle" ended late in the afternoon, and divisions bivouacked on the northern slope.

But there will be little respite for the soldiers for awaiting them is a continuing series of maneuver problems involving long hikes and overnight movements.

St. Louis Air Line Hearings Are Closed

By the Associated Press

The Civil Aeronautics Board concluded today hearings which had been under way since May 19 on applications of Eastern and Transcontinental and Western Airlines for authority to operate a new passenger service between St. Louis, Mo., and Washington, D. C.

Closing testimony was given by Charles Rheinstrom, of New York, vice president of American Airlines, which, with Pennsylvania Central Airlines, opposed the applications. Rheinstrom declared extra schedules now operated by American Airlines provided an adequate service and that no additional schedules were needed.

Mediators Avert Strikes At Five Plants

The National Defense Mediation Board last night obtained a postponement of the strike, scheduled for midnight, at five Cleveland plants of the Aluminum Co. of America, but word came from Los Angeles, at the same time, that 9,000 C. I. O. workers at North American Aviation Co.'s Inglewood plant would strike at 3 a. m., Pacific time, today.

In the North American dispute, members of a mediation board panel had withdrawn in order to permit representatives of the management and the C. I. O. United Auto Workers to negotiate directly. Late in the evening, however, press dispatches brought word of a notice by William P. Goodman, president of the C. I. O. local at North American, that the strike would start today. Goodman charged the mediation board was "stalling the workers."

The union acceptance in the aluminum case followed receipt of a wire from the board, to which the dispute was referred yesterday morning. Issues in the controversy are the union's demand for a higher wage minimum and general wage increases. About 4,500 workers are employed at the plants. Their work is almost exclusively for national defense.

In requesting the postponement, the board set the case for hearing on Monday. Union leaders declared, however, that workers were demanding that the conference be moved up to today and that if it was not, there might be a walkout.

Another board panel, meantime, postponed until today a general meeting of Northern and Southern coal mine operators and representatives of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers to hear the board's final recommendations for settlement of the long drawn out, strike-plagued soft-coal dispute. The meeting had been scheduled for yesterday, following several earlier postponements.

Yesterday's other major labor developments:

Except for the absence of 1,700 A. F. of L. machinists, who continued their three-week strike against 11 San Francisco shipyards, naval construction in the Bay area approached normal operations. Other A. F. of L. metal workers, who had been striking the Bethlehem yards, marched back to work across the machinists' picket lines in response to a Mediation Board plea to resume work pending conferences to settle the dispute.

In Detroit, 8,000 employes of the Great Lakes Steel Corporation walked out in what C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee leaders described as a "spontaneous stoppage." They added that the men believed the management was "stalling" in contract negotiations, centering around wage increase and vacation allowance demands.

Three men were knocked unconscious and a score more suffered minor injuries in a clash between independent union workers and C. I. O. pickets outside the gates of the Auburn, Indiana, Rubber Works. The plant was struck Tuesday night by the United Rubber Workers following a cut in wages.

At San Diego, Calif., the A. F. of L. Association of Machinists decided to vote next Tuesday on whether to strike against the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation. The union is seeking higher wages. The company, holding $700,000,000 of defense orders, employs 16,000 workers, of which 14,000 are represented by the union.

Huge quantities of supplies intended for the armed forces of the United States and Great Britain were tied up in New York by a strike of 1,450 A. F. of L. warehousemen, in defiance of the recommendations of their union leaders to accept a 10 per cent wage increase offered by employers.

No Settlement Yet In Milk Dispute

With only 48 hours remaining before employes of Washington's 12 largest dairies threaten to walk out in strike, no settlement had been reached last night as both union and managements sought to negotiate a new yearly contract.

Members of Milk Drivers and Dairy Employees' Local 246, A. F. of L., last week voted to strike unless a new contract is agreed upon by the time the present one expires at midnight Friday.

Companies negotiating are Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Embassy Fairfax, Richfield, Wakefield, Lucerne, Alexandria, Arlington County, Hazel, Model Farms, Holbrook, Harvey, Thompson's.

Food Traders Hike Prices, Army Charges

By the Associated Press

The War Department, saying there was necessity "to eliminate the harmful effects of speculative activity" in canned food stocks, made a formal request yesterday for suspension of the Walsh-Healey public contracts law so that Army canned food orders might be placed directly with the canners.

The exemption request was accompanied by a memorandum asserting the Army's belief that operations of speculators had effected the price as much as 40 per cent on the type of canned foods which the Army heretofore has been purchasing from dealers and wholesalers.

(In another move to stop rising food prices, the Government's anti-trust division of the Justice Department started action against five major branches of the California food industry when indictments charging price fixing and monopoly were returned Tuesday at San Francisco. The Canners League of California, including 41 canning firms, was one branch indicted.)

The War Department, one of the Nation's biggest single buyers of canned goods, submitted its request to the Labor Department's public contracts division, which announced that a hearing would be held June 9.

The Army's move is expected to bring it into sharp conflict with organized labor which opposes any relaxation of laws prescribing labor standards.

The Walsh-Healey public contracts law prescribes a 40-hour week with time and a half for overtime and safety and health standards for bidders getting Government contracts in excess of $10,000.

It is the time-and-a-half overtime provision, the Army asserts, that makes canners adverse to bidding on Army orders. The wage-hour law exempts canneries from time-and-a-half overtime during peak canning seasons, and canners contend that they cannot segregate their operations.

Labor spokesmen asserted that they would oppose the request because there was a large labor supply and considerable unemployment in the canning industry.

The War Department indicated its purchases for the military forces would amount to 7 or 9 per cent of the 1941 fruit and vegetable pack. From September, 1939, to January, 1941, it purchased $5,000,000 of canned foods.

Fly Tells Senators Chain Curbs Would Benefit Public and Radio Industry

By the Associated Press

Declaring that the Federal Communications Commission rules for chain broadcasting would benefit both the industry and the public, Commission Chairman James L. Fly told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday that efforts were being made to prevent the rules from going into effect until a reorganization of the commission could be obtained.

The FCC chairman made the declaration to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee without identifying those who he said were "playing for time."

Fly appeared at a hearing on a resolution by Senator White (Republican), of Maine, which would request the commission to hold up its rules pending a Senate investigation. He told White that those who were seeking to "wreck the decisions of the commission by long delays" were "flying your flag and marching along behind this bill."

White retorted sharply that this was a "wholly gratuitous and unnecessary reflection on me."

"I said they were marching behind you," Fly replied, "but I don't think it's your intention to lead them in that sort of a fight."

Fly told the committee that "if these gentlemen shall enforce their will—their publicly announced will—of saying who shall sit and who shall not sit on regulatory bodies, that will change the very integrity of the orderly and democratic processes of government."

"These gentlemen," he added, "are proposing a reorganization of the commission—a reorganization that they will approve of."

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the committee remarked at one point that there had been "too much heat" on the part of both broadcasters and the commission over the proposed rules.

"Instead of having a slugging match," he said, "we ought to have the facts. I haven't any respect for those who get into a slugging match on an issue of this kind. It ought to stop. Those back of it are making a mistake."

White told Fly at one point that the commission had exceeded its authority by attempting to specify what constituted monopolistic practice and then outlaw it through rule-making powers.

Fly contended that the commission had a right to prevent monopolistic practice in the public interest.

The commission chairman expressed the opinion that the National Broadcasting Co. would have no difficulty in selling its Blue Network, one of the requirements of commission's rules, and predicted that the Blue Network would be "much healthier" if divorced from the N. B. C. Red Network.

Women Offered Engineer Training By Ohio State U.

Columbus, Ohio, June 4 (AP).—Young women who'd rather figure the mysteries of a slide rule than pound a typewriter now are going to get their chance to fill technical vacancies in industrial plants.

Ohio State University, announcing today that under Government sponsorship it would train free 350 women and men in the fundamentals of engineering, reported numerous requests from industries for women trained along technical lines.

"If the demand continues—and it promises to increase—we will probably see women filling many positions in technical work," said Charles E. MacQuigg, engineering college dean.

"Any young woman who has had the proper educational background, who is physically fit for the busy life of industry, and who wants to serve in a real way during the present crisis will likely find her services in demand."

42 program is to be fulfilled.

"I don't believe everyone has taken the situation seriously enough or aimed high enough, he declared, in urging a further expansion of the arms effort. "The initial program was gone at in too leisurely a fashion."

Senator Connally, (Democrat) of Texas, demanded to know who was at fault for delays in the program and tried to get May to say who was responsible.

"I'm tired of all this buck-passing," he declared finally, "Let's find out who is wrong and we'll put the skids under them."

Hits at Army and Navy

Senator Mead, (Democrat) of New York, criticized the Army and Navy for not getting full information about what was happening abroad, a circumstance, he said, which made the arms program "a series of surprises and a series of rapid expansions."

From Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, came sharp criticism of under-estimates made by OPM officials in raw material requirements.

"Has anyone responsible for these boners been let out and replaced?" he asked May. "I understood those who missed the boat on aluminum planning are still running the show. Private business would long ago have gotten rid of them, but I haven't heard much of that in OPM."

"If you are going to point your finger at everyone who had their sights too low," replied May, you'll include a lot of people—in Congress, the Army and Navy, advisory commission and OPM."

Board to Press For 1-Cent Milk

"For instance, in the Corcoran School," Dr. Ballou wrote Reed, "in which 191 children are enrolled, 80 children would receive milk in connection with the emergency hot lunches at noon, and 111 children would receive the milk at the 10:30 a. m. recess.

"In this way, every child could be provided with his half-pint of milk without increasing the demands upon the WPA funds for the hot lunches at noon. If such a plan were put into effect, it would result in an increase of approximately 9,400 half-pints over and above the 9,000 bottles served at this time in connection with the emergency lunches."

In New York, the city welfare board pays the 1 cent per bottle for milk served undernourished children who receive free lunches. The same practice now obtains here, save that the District has to pay 3.15 cents per bottle because it enjoys no Federal subsidy.

However, in those New York schools where free lunches are not served, the pupils bring their own milk pennies.

What Would Happen Here

If that system were duplicated here, these results might be achieved:

Having to pay only a penny a bottle for milk, instead of 3.15, the Board of Public Welfare could virtually treble the school lunch program; provided, of course, that the WPA, which staffs the central kitchen, could stand the expansion and the volume of surplus commodities—fruits, vegetables, eggs, etc.—which help make the program possible could be increased in proportion.

Then, in those schools certified for milk alone, or where only a portion of the enrollment had free lunch privileges, the children would bring a penny to school each day.

This plan, at least theoretically, would make for maximum consumption.

Alternative Listed

The alternative is to make no charge to needy children for their milk, whether it is served by itself at morning recess or as part of the noon lunch, the cost being borne by local relief funds augmented by the Federal subsidy.

Either plan would more than double present consumption by underprivileged youngsters. Main prerequisites for the institution of a penny project are the existence of ample milk surpluses and proof that the low cost program, if initiated, will appreciably reduce such surpluses.

That puts the issue squarely up to the Marketing Administration.

Figures submitted to Dairy Division Chief Reed, supplemented by the list of 45 school buildings in which a penny project is ripe for launching, indicate that the schools could handle the consumption-increase requirement.

Reply Awaited

Whether this milkshed has the surplus needed to start the penny plan operating here, it is up to the Surplus Marketing Administration to state.

"The superintendent (of schools) awaits a reply from the Department of Agriculture," Dr. Ballou informed the Board of Education yesterday, with respect to his letter of May 31 to Reed.

"If a satisfactory plan is to be forthcoming, the Board of Education will be expected to enter upon an agreement with the Department of Agriculture and the Public Welfare Board."

Heartening developments have followed one another in rapid succession since May 21, when The Post began disclosing evidence that a penny program for the schools and more equitable distribution of nickel quarts of milk to needy families—rigidly certified as qualified—are decidedly in order.

There must be no slackening of pace.

tol that fired them. "No two pistol barrels have ever been discovered which make the same marks on the bullets," said Inspector Fitz-Gerald firmly.

Herbert Ray, 50, Eklund's pool-room companion, testified Tuesday that Eklund had a .38 Colt revolver. Other witnesses said they saw Eklund shooting such a weapon at the tree where two of the bullets shown to the jury were found.

Both the experts testified that they were positive that the bullets from the tree and the bullets from McClaine's body came from the same pistol. It was a .38 Colt, they added.

The Government has offered to prove that he had "a deep and bitter hatred" of colored people. Ray said he had.

Police said that Arthur L. Weatherford, of 1429 Columbia Road Northwest, who worked at Hot Shoppe here at the same time Eklund did, gave them a statement about this supposed hatred. But when he was called as a witness yesterday he said that he either misunderstood a question or the police misunderstood his answer.

In fact, said Weatherford, Eklund expressed no hatred, voiced no intention of doing colored people violence. Prosecutor Murray announced surprise at this testimony, but Weatherford stuck to his story during the cross-examination.

Five minutes later, when being asked about Eklund's gun, Weatherford slumped back into the witness chair in a faint. He had to be taken out and revived.

George Randall, colored bus boy, who worked with Eklund, said the youth always treated him properly and never had any trouble with colored fellow employes.

Defense Counsel Kirkland and his associate, Leonard P. Walsh, said their first important witness today will be Mrs. Sadie Eklund, the defendant's mother. She works for a Government department and lives at 2109 F Street Northwest. There will be half a dozen other witnesses, whose testimony is expected to be completed today.

Symphonies At Watergate Open June 29

As the sun sets on Sunday, June 29, Dr. Hans Kindler will mount the podium on the floating barge at the Potomac Watergate, and the fifth annual series of "Sunset Symphonies" will be under way.

Plans for the 1941 season of concerts by the National Symphony Orchestra at the Watergate—earlier and shorter than usual this year—were announced yesterday at a meeting of the National Symphony Orchestra Association at the Raleigh Hotel.

Dr. Kindler outlined the program of summer symphonies at yesterday's meeting, as varied and colorful a program as the orchestra has ever assembled. The musical events ahead include a patriotic concert on July 2, honoring Independence Day and featuring Lucy Monroe, who is supposed to have sung "The Star-Spangled Banner" more times than any other living soprano; a return engagement, on July 7, of Reginald Steward, distinguished conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, who scored a tremendous personal success at the Watergate three years ago, and a final program, on July 31, featuring a corps de ballet.

Dr. Kindler will conduct the first and final concerts. For his first offering, on June 29, the orchestra leader has arranged a program of music from the conquered countries of Europe, a formula which he used with great success in one of last summer's symphonies. Another repeat performance will be the annual all-Gershwin concert, to be directed by Alexander Smallens, on July 14, a few days after his annual Gershwin memorial program in Lewisohn Stadium, on Gershwin's birthday, July 10.

Conductor Smallens will return to the Watergate on July 24 for his second concert, marking the Washington debut of Elsie Houston, sensational Brazilian singer. Erno Rapee, conductor of the Radio City Music Hall of the Air, will make a return engagement to the Watergate this year on July 28.

Two symphonies will be directed by Ignatz Waghalter, emigre conductor and composer, who was director of the Berlin Opera House Orchestra when Dr. Kindler played first 'cello there, a quarter of a century ago. The first of these programs will be an innovation for Watergate audiences, called "A Night at the Opera" and featuring scenes in costume.

The "Sunset Symphonies" are starting this year without any funds to back them. No drive or campaign for money preceded yesterday's meeting. In order to break even, the more than 8,000 seats at the Watergate will have to be filled for each program this summer. Tickets will range from the familiar seats on the steps, priced at a quarter, to the reserved chairs, priced at $1 and $1.25, or $4 and $5 for a strip of five concert tickets. All concerts will be held on Monday and Thursday evenings, with the exception of the first two, which will be presented on Sunday and Wednesday so to avoid conflicting with Fourth of July vacation plans in Washington.

Bullets Introduced As Evidence

BULLETS were the "star witnesses" in yesterday's Ecklund trial. The lead slug (top) was taken from a tree, where John Eugene Eklund was seen at pistol practice, according to testimony. The lower missile was taken from the body of the slain Hylan McClaine. Experts testified that both were fired from the same gun

New Stamp Parts Rizal's Hair Wrong

Philippine officials expressed indignation today because a new 2-cent postage stamp portrayed the insular patriot Jose Rizal with his hair parted on the right side, which they said was the wrong side.

"This is the second boner that the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has made with stamps for the commonwealth government," an aide to Resident Commissioner Joaquin M. Elizalde declared.

"Some months ago," he added, "instead of showing the Pagsanjan Falls on one of our stamps, they put in a picture of the Vernon Falls in California."

Civic Group To Collaborate With Citizens

Adopting a recommendation of its executive committee, the Federation of Civic Associations last night at a meeting in the board room at the District Building, voted to collaborate with the Federation of Citizens Associations in mutual consideration of resolutions and actions of city-wide interest.

Dr. E. F. Harris, acting president of the association was given a vote of confidence for his "manly and intelligent presentation" of federation views on housing before a committee of Congress. In this connection the federation took under consideration a letter sent to it by John Ihlder, secretary of the Alley Dwelling Authority, and a reply made to him by Lieut. Col. H. D. Queen, former federation president.

Request was made by Ihlder for information as to whether Harris was authorized to represent the federation at the committee hearing. He requested a copy of instructions given Harris, and a copy of the report to the federation on which Harris was instructed to attack the Alley Dwelling Authority before the House committee. None of this information was afforded Ihlder.

Search of the record was made, and authorization discovered for Harris' activity before the committee, although a letter sent to Ihlder by Col. Queen, after he had ceased to operate as president of the federation, indicated that Harris was unauthorized.

Envoy Talks On East Indies Sales to Japan

The United States and the Netherlands pooled their information yesterday in a united effort to keep war materials from reaching Germany via Japan but at the same time refrain from goading Tokyo into seizing valuable oil, tin and rubber resources by force.

Dr. E. N. Van Kleffens, Netherlands foreign minister, said after an interview with President Roosevelt that his government "certainly does not want" war supplies from the East Indies to go to "our enemy Germany."

Van Kleffens has just returned from the Dutch East Indies, where the colonial government is negotiating with Japan for sale of tin, rubber and other supplies. An agreement whereby Japan receives Dutch oil was renewed about a month ago.

Secretary of State Hull, who also saw the Dutch statesman, was asked yesterday at his press conference about U. S. efforts to keep war materials from reaching the Axis via Japan. His reply was that it would not be in the public interest to comment on such matters.

Assurance Sought

Van Kleffens, when asked if any Dutch products were actually reaching Germany by way of Nippon replied that "arrangements have not been completed."

His answer left the impression that the Netherlands government seeks assurances from Japan that any tin and rubber sold to Tokyo will not crop up in Nazi hands.

Speaking of the current trade treaty negotiations with Japan Van Kleffens said "they may have within reason what they need or what can be spared.

"We are a reasonable people," he added, firmly, "but we are against anybody acquiring a dominant position."

The Dutch foreign minister warned against "overdramatizing the negotiations in Batavia, saying that they were complicated by the fact that some of the commodities under discussion were "useful in time of war."

Buying Weapons Here

Van Kleffens said that the Netherlands East Indies, which has been arming itself with weapons bought in the United States, plans to buy more, and will maintain its policy of paying cash, even though he believed his government was eligible for lend-lease aid under H. R. 1776.

The Netherlands desire defense shipments from the United States in as large a quantity as possible, he said, and "we wish it could be more."

Van Kleffens said he was "very well impressed with the ability of the Dutch island group to defend itself from attack. The defenses "exceeded my expectations," he stated.

Four of District's Seven Honor Students Plan to Seek Careers as Engineers

Four of the seven top male students graduating this month from Washington's high schools will seek careers in the field of engineering, both chemical and mechanical, and a fifth will set his course toward chemistry.

This similarity of aims was brought out yesterday by the boys as they outlined their plans at the annual luncheon given by the Rotary Club of Washington at the Willard for the leading senior youths from each of the District's seven high schools. Law is the chosen profession of the sixth honor student, and medicine the choice of the seventh.

The honor seniors at yesterday's luncheon were Kent Balls, of Woodrow Wilson, the future doctor; Bernard Harrison, of Central, the would-be judge; Louis Domeratsky, jr., of Western, who wants to become a mechanical engineer; Cadet Col. David Rhodes, of Eastern, embryo chemical engineer; Allen Weise, of Roosevelt, who hopes to find remedies for "hay fever, colds and poison ivy" as a research chemist; Nelson Vance, of Anacostia, another mechanical engineer-elect, and John Stuntz, of McKinley, who has an eye to a future as an engineer.

The young men are selected annually by their principals and teachers to attend the luncheon and receive the Rotarians' honor certificates. They are chosen on the bases of scholarship (consistently high grades, membership in the National Honor Society, scholarships earned to colleges and universities, and award of the Harvard Book (which is given to outstanding juniors), leadership (in the cadet corps and high school organizations), character and citizenship.

Before presenting Dr. Frank Ballou, superintendent of the public schools here, who introduced the students, Bert Nye, president of the Washington Rotary Club, received a flag for the club from Dr. Josue Gollan, president of the Universidad Littoral, Santa Fe, Argentina.

Other guests of the club included Albert Atwood, magazine writer, who briefly outlined the aims of the Washington branch of United Service Organizations for National Defense, and Dr. James A. Gannon, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle and C. Melvin Sharpe, members, and Mrs. Elice Watkins, secretary, of the Board of Education, and Assistant Principals Cantrell, Holmes, Crane and Haycock, of Dr. Ballou's staff.

The students were accompanied by representatives of the seven high schools; Dr. Elmer S. Newton, principal of Western; Norman J. Nelson, principal of Wilson; Miss Mae T. Bradshaw, principal of Roosevelt; Michael Kelley, assistant principal of Eastern; Frank Benjamin, McKinley principal; Central's Principal Lawrence Hoover, and John Paul Collins, head of Anacostia High School.

Two More Camps to Open for Objectors

The National Service Board for religious objectors reported yesterday that two more camps for objectors will open today.

One is located near Colorado Springs, Colo. It will be used chiefly for Mennonites from Kansas. The other camp at Richmond, Ind., will contain mostly Quakers. Both groups will engage in soil conservation, it was said.

Six civilian public service camps are now in operation, national headquarters said, at Grottoes, Va.; Marietta, Ohio; San Dimas, Calif.; Colorado Springs, Colo.; Lagro, Ind., and in the Patapsco State Forest, near Baltimore, Md. Six additional camps will soon be opened it was stated.

Under the program approved by President Roosevelt and the Selective Service System, conscientious objectors judged sincere by local boards will perform a year's work in keeping with their religious convictions against military service.

Meanwhile, District Selective Service headquarters, announced yesterday the local draft board quotas for the District's last June inductions for military training. A total of 208 white men will be inducted on June 26 and 27, and 154 colored on June 26, 27, 28 and 30. The quotas follow:

Cutter Modoc Saw Bismarck Plane Attack

An American Coast Guard cutter, operating with the Atlantic naval patrol, witnessed part of the running battle between the German battleship Bismarck and British warships which ended in the sinking of the pride of the Nazi navy off the coast of France.

Officials disclosed yesterday that the cutter Modoc watched British planes attacking the dreadnaught after it had sunk the battle cruiser Hood and was trying to evade the vengeance of the British fleet.

The Modoc did not follow the chase across the Atlantic and was not in at the death, it was said, but its officers and crew were eyewitnesses to the bombing and torpedo attacks on the Bismarck by the British air arm.

Several Coast Guard vessels were in the waters off Greenland during the earlier duel between the Hood and the Bismarck, and were in the vicinity of the battle, it was said, but none actually saw the historic battle.

Afterwards, however, it was stated, the cutter Gen. Greene picked up some survivors of British merchantmen which had been sunk by the Bismarck prior to the battle.

Continuance of the civilan pilot training course at Wilson Teachers College through the summer months was recommended by the board.

The board's last meeting of the season will be June 25.

Distritc Committee Named To Aid Ickes in Oil Problem

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association yesterday announced formation of a committee to study fuel oil problems in Washington and cooperate in an advisory capacity with Harold L. Ickes, petroleum coordinator for national defense.

L. S. Scott, appointed chairman, announced that the committee would make a complete survey of local petroleum requirements with particular regard to fuel oil for home heating.

"Ways and means will be found to provide a sufficient supply of fuel oil for home heating purposes," he said.

It has been suggested that home owners in the East, because of transportation difficulties, would be forced to economize on heat obtained from oil furnaces.

Aviation Gasoline Goal Established

By W. H. Lawrence
Copyright by New York Times

Plans to step up production of finished 100 octane aviation gasoline to 50,000 barrels daily within the next 18 months to meet mounting military demands of the United States and British air forces were announced yesterday by the Office of Production Management.

Dr. Robert E. Wilson, OPM petroleum unit consultant, and the joint aeronautical board of the Army and Navy recommended the 25 per cent increase in the productive capacity of the high octane aviation gasoline industry, although the industry's present capacity is entirely adequate for the next 12 months.

The announcement came as Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, Federal petroleum coordinator for national defense, conferred with President Roosevelt and said that he hoped to be able to announce today initial plans for alleviating a fuel and gasoline shortage impending on the Atlantic Seaboard as a result of diversion of 50 tankers from the United States to Great Britain.

Ickes indicated his first action would be to reallocate tanker facilities in order to use them more effectively to supply Eastern States. He emphasized that the prospective fuel shortage was due to transportation means, and not to a deficiency in supplies.

The Oil Burner Institute, representing manufacturers of oil burning equipment and their dealers, pledged their cooperation with Ickes in a campaign to save substantial amounts of heating oil in the national emergency by bringing about more efficient use of heating equipment in homes, buildings and factories. The institute estimated that if the efficiency of existing oil burner equipment was brought to or above the commercial standard set by the Bureau of Standards, it would be possible to save from 14,000,000 to 17,000,000 barrels per season in the Atlantic coast area.

"The serious effort by any American industry or industrial group to meet the impending petroleum transportation situation is welcome news," Secretary Ickes commented. "Strenuous cooperative efforts, such as that of the Oil Burner Institute, which promises to save significant amounts of petroleum products, will go a long way toward helping to solve our petroleum difficulties.

"We face a set of hard facts regarding petroleum that will require all of us to make some kind of adjustments. I am sure that American industry, as well as individual citizens, can help to meet the situation. Conservation of petroleum products is certainly one way, and I hope that this movement will be widely expanded."

One-Man Scout Cars Ordered In 9 Precincts

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendant of police, yesterday ordered commanding officers in nine precints to use only one man instead of two in scout cars beginning at 8 a. m. Sunday.

The police chief's action came at the direction of the Commissioners who informed him that they had decided to give one-man cars "a thorough trial in residential sections."

Terming the use of one man in the patrol cars "an experiment" the Commissioners instructed Maj. Brown "to select carefully a good man in each case because it is thought there are men who can successfully do this work alone and others who cannot." It was ordered that the "experiment should cover both the day and night shifts."

Maj. Brown said the cars will be operated solo in all but the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Thirteenth Precincts, with the exception of one car in the Seventh Precinct which patrols the waterfront.

Object of trying to utilize only one man in the cars, it was said, is to increase the number of foot patrolmen on beats. Under the present plan, 18 additional footmen will be available each trick of duty.

Maj. Brown "tried out" one-man cars for 30 days last summer and then reverted to the old system of two-man cars. He said at that time that all his precinct commanders had condemned one-man cars as unsatisfactory and "extremely dangerous."

White House Call By Murphy Causes Stir

By the Associated Press

A second call at the White House within a week by Supreme Court Jutice Frank Murphy stirred speculation yesterday as to what he and President Roosevelt have been discussing, but officials would throw no light on the visits.

Friends of the justice denied rumors that he might resign to become High Commissioner to the Philippines, a position he held before he was elected Governor of Michigan in 1936.

Lovett, Stark Broadcast To Aero Body

Robert A. Lovett, Assistant Secretary of War for Air, declared last night that "American mass production methods now are geared" to manufacture airplanes "in numbers sufficient to overwhelm the enemies of democracy."

Lovett spoke on a radio broadcast from Washington in connection with the National Aeronautic Association meeting in Louisville.

On the same program, Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, said that one result of warship and airplane coordination in the Navy's Atlantic patrol "has been an increased mutual appreciation of the close teamwork between surface and air which can be had and must be had for successful naval operations."

Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Army Air Corps chief, declared that the United States was producing the best long range bombers in the world and that those ships were the key to the aerial defenses of the Western Hemisphere.

Arnold said that fully adequate air protection must include short range pursuit and fighter planes as well as the far-flying bombers and that to accomodate the former "it is important that a network of bases be established throughout the Western Hemisphere."

All the speakers paid tribute to the part civil aviation has played in making possible expansion of combat plane production.

Lovett said that "from the experience of these (civilian) manufacturers and operators stems much of the superb technique which has enabled us to build bombers and other combat craft of unsurpassed excellence."

"As you all know the airplane is a native of America," Lovett continued. "American genius invented it, American mechanical competence perfected it and American mass production methods are now geared to turn it out in numbers sufficient to overwhelm the enemies of democracy. Thanks to the airplane, North America and South America are no longer two continents. They are one—the continent of America.

Defense of Americas Planned

Louisville, Ky., June 4 (AP).—Although the Axis powers "are sparing no efforts to rupture or destroy the growth of confidence and understanding" between Western Hemisphere nations, "a plan for common defense of the 21 American republics has been completed," Thomas Burke, Washington, chief of the State Department's division of international communications, said today.

Burke, speaking before the National Aeronautic Association convention, said he was "not at liberty to discuss specific measures" of the defense plan.

"But I assure you," he added, "that in terms of principle, it adequately reflects the fondest dreams of the illustrious prophets of our respective nations who gave their full measure of devotion to establish in fact a brotherhood of independent States."

In a banquet speech tonight, Gill Robb Wilson, president of the American Aeronautic Association, urged that the Administration in Washington "throw the wraps off from what he called the "dependence of the military on traditional land and sea forces.

"We in American aviation are ready to defend our country with our lives and our experience," he said.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Powers Bill 'Kiss of Death,' Cox Declares

The bill to permit President Roosevelt to commandeer property of all kinds, either temporarily or permanently, was denounced yesterday in the House by Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, as "the kiss of death to free Government" if ever passed.

House members applauded further when Cox said that the bill was "the most astounding measure of dictatorial powers ever introduced in this country."

In the Senate the bill, designed in part to provide a curb on defense strikes, was seriously questioned by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

"The bill is not the solution for defense strikes," said Byrd. "That can be much better accomplished through mediation and arbitration. Also, the Government cannot be expected to be as efficient in running industry as private management."

One of the Administration's stanchest supporters, Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, said he thought the bill was "too sweeping" and suggested it should be re-referred to the Judiciary Committee, as well as to the Military Affairs Committee, for "careful study and hearings."

Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, who introduced the measure in the Senate, said the Senate Military Affairs Committee, of which he is chairman, will take up the matter of hearings at its meeting this week.

Senator Byrd, discussing the bill, said there was very little the President could not do, if given the powers outlined. He called it "fantastic" and "entirely too drastic."

"It would permit the President to commander private property, with no appeal, and to place his own valuation upon it, subject to expensive litigation, if the owner thinks the valuation too low," he said.

"It can even be sold to private parties by the Government. Under this a plant could be commandeered and sold to a competitor."

Drivers Must KeepLeft-Hand Doors Closed

A new traffic regulation prohibiting motorists from opening the left doors of their cars while parked either double or at the curb "when such action creates a hazard to oncoming traffic" was adopted by the Commissioners yesterday.

Upon recommendations from the Traffic Advisory Council and with endorsement of the Police Department and Public Utilities Commission, the city heads also designated portions of four streets for one-way traffic and ordered parking restrictions on 13 other thoroughfares.

The new rule against opening car doors on the left has long been advocated by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer. The Commissioners' order reads:

"The driver of a vehicle on a public roadway shall not open a door of such vehicle on the side where traffic is approaching from the rear, unless it can be done without interfering with moving traffic or pedestrians and with safety to himself or passengers."

Rules governing one-way streets were adopted as follows:

Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, south driveway, from Forty-ninth Street to Fordham Road, eastbound traffic only.

Thirty-ninth Street Northwest from Wisconsin Avenue to Albemarle Street, northbound traffic only.

L Street Southeast from Tenth to Eleventh Streets, eastbound traffic only.

Potomac Avenue Southeast from Eighth to Tenth Streets, eastbound traffic only.

The new parking restrictions are:

Constitution Avenue Northwest from Fourth to Sixth Streets, one hour parking between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., except in front of the new National Gallery of Art, where there will be no parking on the south side at any time.

De Sales Street, from Seventeenth Street to Connecticut Avenue Northwest, no parking on the north side between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m.

ARRANGE DISPLAYS—Mrs. T. E. Beall, chairman of the show, and Mrs. J. Melvin Riley, chairman of the luncheon, arrange some flowers displayed at the Bethesda Garden Club Show

Mrs. Montgomery J. Norfleet, 507 Maple Ridge Road, Bethesda, Md., won the grand prize for the highest number of points in the annual spring flower show of the Bethesda Community Garden Club, held yesterday at the Battery Park Clubhouse.

The winner took six blue ribbons, four reds and four greens in the specimen and arrangement classes. She also won the gold ribbon for her exhibit of an apricot-colored Bervier, judged the best rose in the show. She was presented with a pottery vase.

Runners-up were Mrs. Horace Beall and Miss Sue Thomas, sisters, of 6808 Exfair Road, Bethesda, who were awarded the second prize, also a vase. They captured five blue, three red and two green ribbons.

Man Gets Back Father's Ring Lost 25 Years Ago

Frank C. Warman, of 3345 Seventeenth Street, lost a gold ring that belonged to his father. Yesterday it was returned to him—25 years later.

The ring was lost when Warman, a clerk in the Navy Department, lived at 15 Avon Avenue in Hyattsville, Maryland. He had been watering the lawn and dropped it in the back yard.

Monday, Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the Prince Georges County police, in Hyattsville, found the ring on the person of Charles McKeever, colored, of Hyattsville, who had been arrested for disorderly conduct. McKeever insisted he found the valuable ring recently when spading a back yard at Warman's former address.

Although Warman has not lived in Hyattsville for 20 years the ring was identified by the initials A. L. W. and E. B. C. stamped in it. His father's name was Alfred Love Warman and his mother's, Evalina Burson Corson.

Crockett Is Victor In Run-off Ballot

James I. Crockett, of the Evening Star, defeated Williamson C. George, of the Times Herald yesterday in a run-off election for the office of secretary-treasurer of the Columbia Typographical Union.

Crockett was realected by a vote of 1,281 to 938, and will hold office for the next two years. The regular election was held May 31, but because of failure to cast a majority of votes for the office of secretary-treasurer it was necessary to conduct the run-off election yesterday.

Only Jurists Apply

In the century and a half since the United States became a Nation we have had only 11 Chief Justices. So it is a rare privilege that has come to President Roosevelt to name a successor to Charles Evans Hughes. The Supreme Court is the only one of the three coordinate branches of our Government whose top-ranking official is appointed instead of being elected. Obviously, then, the Chief Justiceship is the most important post that can be filled by action of the President and the Senate.

The fact that the new Chief Justice will be measured against the illustrious record of Mr. Hughes is probably another reason why the President does not expect to make a hasty appointment. This great responsibility has come to him at a time when he is under pressure from many other sources. As the President indicated at his press conference on Tuesday, he will need time to survey the field and single out the jurist-statesman who is most qualified for this post. Certainly the nomination should not be made in a hurry. Yet it is also clear that this top position in our judicial system should not be left vacant any longer than is necessary to fill it properly.

Even during the summer months when the court does not hold its routine sessions its work goes forward. The justices familiarize themselves with cases that will have to be disposed of when the new term opens. More than 800 cases a year are presented to the court. A new Chief Justice, should he be chosen from outside the present court membership, would be severely handicapped if the appointment should be delayed until next fall.

In filling this unique position, however, the qualifications of the nominee will always be more important than the timing of his appointment. The character of the court for many years to come may be determined in large measure by the caliber of men the President selects to succeed Mr. Hughes and the retired Justice McReynolds. It must be remembered, moreover, that when these vacancies are filled, this court of nine members will have seven Roosevelt appointees. To date the President has selected five justices from his own Administration and a close circle of advisers. Continuation of that practice would give the court a lack of balance it has not experienced since the early days of the Republic.

The position of Chief Justice ought to go as a matter of course to the most eminent jurist in the country. It calls for many qualities of statesmanship and administrative ability. But these ought to be combined with a thorough knowledge of the law, of American Government, institutions and political thought. Perhaps an even more important element in the make-up of a Chief Justice is the quality of judicial temperament and the training in impartial analysis of facts which have contributed so largely to Chief Justice Hughes' greatness. The political character of some of the appointments made to date only emphasizes the importance of seeking out jurists of the highest caliber for the vacancies soon to be filled.

More Farm Controls

One form of price control leads inevitably to other kinds of control. That fact was brought home to farmers who balloted for the first time last week on a proposal for establishment of marketing quotas for wheat. They approved the plan by much more than the two-thirds majority required to make it effective. The necessity for imposing such marketing controls is quite apparent in view of the sudden lift to prices resulting from the 85 per cent of parity loan program. More and more farmers might have considered it advantageous under such conditions to withdraw from the production-control plan and grow increased amounts of wheat in the expectation of obtaining higher prices for a larger output. In other words, when farm prices were boosted to unusual heights by crop loans, there was a real danger that the entire system of production control would break down just when restrictions upon output were most needed. It was to prevent that from happening that wheat marketing quotas were voted. They will apply to cooperators and noncooperators alike, and exact heavy penalties for selling above specified allotments. What has happened, of course, is that the wheat farmer has been virtually compelled to participate in the Government's production-control program by the excessively high marketing penalties, though the fiction of voluntary participation continues to be maintained.

Too Much Power

President Roosevelt's assurance that he has not read the property seizures bill should help to quell the storm which that measure has aroused on Capitol Hill. Apparently the President is seeking only to extend his present emergency powers to make certain that defense production will not be frustrated. In an effort to implement that policy the War Department drafted a sweeping bill that would permit him to take over virtually any private property any time he might declare the existence of an emergency. In other words, a crude measure has been drawn to carry out a legitimate and essential policy.

In time of war or great national emergency the Nation's strength must be mobilized for defense of the common welfare. That principle is well established. If a factory is needed for the manufacture of ammunition or other war supplies, the Government should be in a position to take it over. Any and all other property or equipment useful for protection of the national interest should also be at the disposal of the Government during such periods upon the payment of just compensation. Where further legislation is needed to give effect to this policy in the present emergency, Congress will doubtless enact it.

Further legislation is needed for two reasons: first, according to the OPM, a substantial quantity of machine tools is being withheld from defense plants where they could be constructively used. Indubitably the President should have all the power he needs to requisition such tools and use them to best advantage. Secondly, the President has pointed out that additional powers are required to enable the Government to take over plants closed by strikes. The Government cannot stand by and see its policies defeated because of a disagreement between employers and their employes. In both these instances the Administration's plea for more authority to speed up defense production will have overwhelming public support.

A distinction must be drawn, however, between legislation for these purposes and a general grant of power that would permit the President to usher in a collectivist state. The War Department bill would permit the President, during any period of national emergency proclaimed by himself, to take over, "either temporarily or permanently, property of any kind or character" which is useful, directly or indirectly, for national defense. Furthermore, he could sell or otherwise dispose of such property on his own terms.

This is, indeed, a sweeping grant of power. Presumably the President could use some of the billions appropriated for defense to buy up huge industrial plants and then sell the plants to new owners. Or they could be kept permanently by the Government for peacetime operation. To say that the War and Navy Departments have no such plans in mind is not a sound argument for the granting of such enormous powers. It is difficult to see, moreover, why the issue of permanent governmental use of private property should be raised. Surely the needs of defense can be satisfied by Federal control of strategic plants and supplies during the period of the emergency. To look beyond that is to inject a controversial issue into an acute defense question.

Once before, during the debate on the Selective Service Act, New Deal legislators attempted to obtain the right to take permanent possession of private industries engaged in defense work. Congress rejected that proposal and authorized temporary Federal control of such plants if their owners refused to cooperate with the Government. Similar safeguards can unquestionably be written into the present bill. We must give the Administration all the power it needs to meet this world crisis, but Congress should not permit itself to be stampeded into smashing down the barriers which separate democracy from dictatorship.

Battle Of Syria

The Battle of Syria appears on the verge of taking the place of the Battle of Crete. During recent days there have been persistent reports that German "tourists," mechanized units and planes have arrived in the French mandated area. Berlin and Vichy deny these reports. But it is difficult to accept these denials at their face value. If the Nazis have not yet landed in Syria, there is every reason to believe that they will not wait long before attempting to do so. Hitler cannot afford to dissipate his Cretan triumph by indulging in a prolonged period of inaction. Nor can he afford to allow Great Britain a breathing spell in which to consolidate her gains in Iraq. Indeed, a two-pronged drive on Cyprus from the direction of Crete and the Dodecanese Islands and on Iraq via Syria is an immediate possibility.

Hitherto every time Hitler has gone on the rampage he has found the British on the defensive. That was true in Crete, earlier in Greece, before that in Norway. In Crete, according to some of the British criticisms, the defenders did not even bother to build new airfields. There is a possibility this time that the British will not stand by idly with hands folded while the Nazis prepare the assault. Their defense, alas, is handicapped by the French attitude. The attitude of Vichy, now completely subservient to Berlin, makes it apparent that, far from opposing the use of Syria as a Nazi base of operations, the Petain government may be willing actively to cooperate with Hitler against France's former ally. The British, however, may forestall this. For a punctilious respect for the mythical neutrality of France could only be harmful to the British. In taking the initiative in Syria, and by active measures preventing that mandated area from being taken over by the Nazis, the British might reduce the possibility that the impending struggle in Syria will go the way of the struggle in Crete.

Air Convoy

At his press conference last week the President parried the question of how deliveries to England are to be assured by saying that that is a thing Hitler would like to know. Since then there has been no further enlightenment from any official source. But the suggestion of a constant sky patrol of the sea lanes to Britain, proffered by Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, makes sense—and it may be no idle conjecture. At the opening session Monday of the aviation defense forum, sponsored by the National Aeronautical Association, Col. Jouett outlined an impressive plan for aerial capital ships which would depart from North American bases on regular schedule to patrol convoy routes. Long-range, four-engined planes, he claimed, can patrol a zigzag course over a convoy route, say 200 miles wide, all the way to England with a fair chance of spotting and destroying enemy submarines and raiders.

This plan would depend, of course, upon the aircraft industry's reaching, perhaps surpassing, its present objective of 500 long-range bombers a month. It would presumably entail delivery of the planes to Canadian or British crews who would fly the Atlantic much as they patrol the waters around England. Occasionally, it seems, weather conditions would play havoc with Col. Jouett's plan, either forcing cancellation of scheduled flights or obliging bombers to fly above or around storm centers—in both cases negating the value of the planes as spotters. On the other hand, with fair visibility, superdreadnoughts of the air, possessing as they do a range of some 12,000 miles, might prove at least a partial answer to the convoy problem.

William Of Doorn

Death came to William of Hohenzollern yesterday as a long-delayed anticlimax. For years he had been nothing more than a museum piece, a dim figure out of the distant past. He had outlived both his triumphs and his defeat, the acclaim he had received from the multitude he had ruled as Kaiser of Germany, and the fierce hatred that surrounded him later when to hundreds of millions outside the Reich he was regarded as the arch-plotter responsible for the destruction and bloodletting of World War I. The Germany he had so proudly ruled was dragged in the dust of defeat. The Germany of the Republic had no happier fate. Then came a new Germany, one that resembled the Kaiser's Reich in so many particulars, not least in its overweening ambition, but which lacked even the decencies and restraints which obtained during the reign of William II.

In his Dutch retreat William tended his roses and his woodpile, and presided over the little court he had created around him in exile to provide an echo of past grandeur. Till Hitler overran Holland he was obliged to remain there. Then the legal barriers in the way of his return to Germany were lifted, but William never left his place of exile. He stayed on at Doorn. There, at least, he could keep alive the memories of the past, at least those that did not have too poignant connotations. The world will waste no tears on the dead Kaiser. But, in contrast to the rule of Hitler, the rule of William II must seem to a great many Germans a memory of the golden age. In essential particulars, however, the Germany of Hitler is only a projection, a polarization, of the worst of the Wilhelmian era, since they were both, as we said yesterday, the perversion of a philosophy.

ANTIGONE

Where has my spring gone, gone so bitterly soon?
If it were winter, now, or fall or August, even,
with its hot, moon-haunted night, if the leaves on other trees were dry and wind-driven
I should not question Fate.

My boughs are petal-laden and all my fruit hidden within the April tightness of the blossom core.
If now the sap were still and done with bubbling up through branches grown mature then might the leaves fall and every limb be clean and naked to the rain.

No 'Wave Of The Future'

The famous suggestion that the pirate nations, and especially Germany, are offering the world a "wave of the future" so beneficent that nonacceptance is a crime must be worth many divisions to Hitler. It probably salves the conscience of many decent Germans, and helps to paralyze our efforts, letting the isolationists believe that a Hitler victory would be quite tolerable, or even a splendid thing.

This suggestion has been splendidly contradicted by many writers, who have not forgotten the saying: "Nor can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit." The most important thing about it has not received much attention. This is that there isn't any Nazi wave of the future—not really. The Nazis are the greatest enemies alive of the wave of the future. They have bitterly denounced and attacked various forms of it—if we accept the definition of it as social reform, given by those who praise it.

Their real wave is a maelstrom—selfish conquest. That means war, and their much-praised social arrangements have some possibly good features, though inferior to what we find in the best democracies.

It is all in the record. As soon as the Nazis came to power they began singing their hymn of conquest: "Today we own our Germany, tomorrow all the world." Quite early they offered to help businessmen against labor. Next they put down the businessmen as they had suppressed the unions. Still they said: "Our watchword—the annihilation of Marxism." A little later Hitler was: "Savior of humanity against Bolshevism," thus getting indispensable support from Britain. Now he has joined hands with Bolshevism against the "plutodemocracy" of Britain—and us.

Can anyone say what he will do next? Would anyone but Lindbergh and the mollifiers propose to trust him an inch? Are not his claims, promises and slogans and the things he has done—even those which are good in a way—mainly pretexts and means to the one end of world domination?

Peace Rally

What impressed me most about the huge audience which attended the Keep America Out of War rally at Turner's Arena last week was the complete unanimity of thought. The applause of each speaker's remarks and the attentiveness given the electrical transcription of President Roosevelt's preelection speeches declaring that he hated war and that he would abide by the Democratic Party's platform pledge to keep America out of war was impressive to one who went solely to judge the attitudes of a group. Mrs. Roosevelt, who, in one of her press conferences, said she did not recall that the President had made a promise to that effect, would have been startled, had she been in that Washington audience, by the sincerity of the calm, heart-warming and friendly voice that is her husband's. It was interesting to watch the nods of heads of several in the audience as they seem to express in silence the thought of, "Yes, I remember. He did say that."

What The Irish Can Do

"What can the Irish do?" you ask in your editorial in The Post of June 3, discussing the bombs on Dublin. Reportedly they fired on the bombing planes with the weapons they have. Sell them more and better arms and planes and they can and will use them to repel any attack. Deny them the right to buy more, and all they can do if attacked is to defend themselves to the best of their ability with the arms they have—helped, perhaps, by promises of arms to come from our Government.

'Picket-Line' Mothers

I hope that everyone has read the article "War Is a National, Not a Personal, Problem" by Mark Sullivan, published in The Post June 1. Indeed, it is lamentable and tragic to see the "picket-line" mothers pleading for their sons and to know that everywhere offices are overflooded with letters expressing such sentiment as "I do not want war" or "I do not want our boys to go to war." This is discouraging for our boys and very encouraging for Hitler.

Of course, we dislike war, but, if war should come to us, are we going to shrink into our shells like snails? Now, it is only a question of preparation and, if we become strong enough, the foe will not dare. But we must not lose sight of the gravity of the present situation. If our boys are wiling to be trained under the wise leadership of our officers in military tactics, then when worse comes to worse, they will be able to defend their lives, their families, their beloved land, and the precious liberty given to them by the generous sacrifices of their forefathers.

Women of America, we shall not fail them. Let us show the world that we still possess the traditional courage by defending and preserving our love of freedom.

Overton Case

Last week's Congressional Record carries remarks by Senators George, Brown, Thomas, Clark, Connally, McNary and Overton. These speeches are astounding, for it seems incredible that Senators should brazenly continue to misrepresent the facts and actually champion their whitewashing of the Overton case. Senator Thomas asked if the Overton investigation was not the first Senate investigation in which the radio was used—thereby seeking to create the impression that an unusually open and fair investigation had been held. He did not say—as he well knew—that the Senators took to the radio like frightened geese because the public had discovered that whitewash was in progress and the Senators hoped to nullify press accounts of the ugly situation with soft-spoken words over the microphone. Nor did he say that it was the first investigation in Senate history where the chairman of an august Senate Committee—Senator Tom Connally—had to reach his hearing room via a fire escape and window because an enraged public barred the doors of that hearing room.

In this hour of grave, national crisis it is lamentable that the Senate is willing to be reflected in the public mirror as a body of slick politicians who have let Senatorial honor die.

The Post's Pen

My heartfelt congratulations to you on your Sunday editorial—"Mr. Lindbergh's 'Reply!'"

Many of us who are inarticulate have been wondering how long, O Lord, how long will our newspapers continue to give this person, Lindbergh, the benefit of the doubt.

If the Nazi-decorated Lindbergh has the gall to call for a "new leadership" now—between elections—why shouldn't every American editor have the "guts" to label him a menace to our Constitutional form of Government?

So more power to your pen!

Full Effort

In order to outdo this dreamer, Hitler, whose dreams have already turned our world into one gigantic nightmare, we, too, must learn to dream of fearful things to come. We, too, must imagine a world where freedom is unknown—a world where force and terror rule over all who now hope, and who have become accustomed—all too accustomed—to kindly intent on the part of democratic government.

Let us, therefore, see ourselves as Hitler sees us—slaves, one and all, in a world-wide Nazi "new order" of slavery, which must grow always more intense as it grows more inescapable, more killing to our bodies and our souls. Only eight years in power, Hitler has already condemned all mankind to slavery. We, even we of this land of the free, are already marked for a fate which we dread more than any war.

We are marked and condemned. And in this one and only chance for "revolt" which now, for a little while, is ours, let us release all our energies without limit, and our hearts and souls, themselves, for such a miracle of war effort as shall turn this deadly peril into absolute and universal victory for freedom.

After all, what is it but a matter of effort? No effort, no victory; full effort, full victory, and all that goes therewith. We, who are all condemned by Hitler, need not hope beyond our will to revolt against Hitler, and to revolt with all we have and all we are, counting every moment lost a moment of world-wide tragedy.

Florida Canal

Has not the time come for a dispassionate reexamination of the Florida Ship Canal project? It does begin to appear that, while those who have hitherto opposed this facility did in many instances act in entire good faith, the combination of forces which defeated the project in 1939 made a tragic mistake from the point of view of our war situation.

The shortage of ships, which the Florida canal would have minimized; the now developed shortage of petroleum, which the canal could have prevented (by using barges to supplement ships); and the inevitable forthcoming shortage of commodities such as lumber, sulphur, phosphates, ores, cotton, foodstuffs, leather, etc. which cannot be shipped by pipe line, and which the railroads cannot possibly transport entirely—all are now become matters which must transcend political and sectional differences.

It is perfectly true that the Florida canal cannot be completed to ship-canal dimensions within four years. But neither can the new Navy, nor the St. Lawrence, nor our new program of merchant-ship building. Temporary locks would have been resorted to for this purpose, but these would be small and, according to Army engineer estimates, would cost less than $3,500,000. To build the canal to barge depth would cost, according to the same authorities, less than $22,000,000, and completion to ship-canal dimensions could follow as rapidly as possible. This cost to initiate a continuous barge transport system between the Mississippi Valley and Gulf sections and the Atlantic seaboard, is only a fraction of the cost of the proposed pipe lines, and the time factor is about the same. The pipe-line system may be necessary as an emergency measure, but it should not be forgotten that because of the far greater cost of transporting petroleum by this means as compared with tanker or barge transport, pipe lines will cease to function when the emergency is over, while the canal will remain as a continuing facility for economic transportation.

The Post Impressionist

The Whole Tooth

I have long marveled at the loquacity of dentists. Walking into their well-appointed and amply magazined offices you see nothing to warn you that the powers of reticence possessed by dentists would not compare favorably with conditions in other professions. A doctor of medicine, for example, after he has asked you a few stock questions, has seen your tongue, and has told you bluntly that there's nothing the matter with you, or that what you thought it was is not it at all, shuts up like a clam and goes on about his business. He shows no outward sign that he cares one whit how you may be getting on in your new house or how many miles you may be getting to the gallon of gasoline. Indeed, his unconcern often approaches the point of rudeness.

Not so, however, the dentist. There is something about looking into the aching void of a human mouth that seems to set him off. An upper incisor, no matter how tartar-stained or battered by the ravages of nut shells and hard candy, is all that is needed to inspire him to eloquent discourse. A broken-down molar is to him an hour's work but also it is the chance for an hour's conversation. A wisdom tooth worn down to the gums sends him into a paroxysm of prolixity.

Only God and Robert Browning, I suppose, know why this articulate impulse should be almost altogether interrogative in form. Under ordinary circumstances the reclining, nerve-racked patient would not object to listening to an uninterrupted monologue delivered on a subject even of the dentist's own choosing. There is a chance that it might soothe his shattered ganglia or divert his mind from the unpleasantnesses going on in the depths of his jaw. But for him to have to participate in the colloquy is an infliction that even the dread toothache itself can scarcely eclipse.

It was only a month or so ago that I attended one of these causeries. I had relaxed into a semicomatose mood, awaiting for the dentist to emerge from his inner sanctum. For the last time I was passing my tongue affectionately over a few cavities that were soon to receive their silver lining. Strangely, there was running through my head those familiar lines of Lewis Carroll:

"The time has come," the walrus said,
"To talk of many things:
Of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—
Of cabbages—and kings—
And why the sea is boiling hot—
And whether pigs have wings."

Presently in he came, and, before I could scarcely say "Hi, Doc," he had his fist and pick in my mouth and had begun his fiendish work.

"Well, well, Mr. Oehser, how have you been?" he asked.

Hoping to conserve my resources, I did not think this perfunctory question merited so much as a grunt. I simply wrinkled my left cheek into a simulated smile, which seemed to satisfy him.

"I suppose they've been keeping you pretty busy these days," came next.

I let this go too, since it was not a direct question.

"Where are you working now?"

"Gr—ll—ng—ohn—ung—aa," I replied, as best I could.

"Same place, eh? Must be an interesting place to be. You know, I haven't visited the Smithsonian in many years. Used to go there Sunday after Sunday with my kids. Is the bird man, Robert Ridgway, still down there?"

"Dgnnn—l-ahng—gah—ong."

"You don't say? Too bad. He was a great man."

By now the dread drilling had started. I braced my feet wishing I were in position to grit my teeth. I suppose I winced a little.

"Does that hurt any?"

"Wnngg—llllllrrrrr—krlg—haaagl—ahrnggglah!"

"We'll be through in a minute. How're Mrs. Oehser and the family?"

"Ngah—glaahng—clrrg—ungle—ahgle—ohging—crrrlllllgnah-ah-ah-ah."

"Fine. Better rinse your mouth out now."

I hoped he might be through, but he put a bigger and better brace in the bit and resumed.

"Where are you living now?"

"Cl—ng—r-r-r-keglha."

"It's nice out there. Lots of new houses going up. How are the taxes?"

"Hll-ll-ll-ll."

There was a brief pause while he fitted various contraptions around my gums, put padding in my jowls, and under my tongue inserted a saliva pump, which gurgled like a babbling brook. Squirting a shot of air into one of the newly opened excavations, he continued:

"Do you have much of a garden this year?"

"Nnyah."

"How does your iris look?"

"Glah."

I can't remember much else; I was gradually weakening. They told me afterward that the ambulance got there about an hour later. When I awoke I was in my own bed at home. Suddenly I remembered everything and ran my tongue around just to make sure. Everything seemed to be all right. My wife came in and asked, "How do you feel now?"

"Glllll—ngngn," I said and sank back to sleep again.

Today And Tomorrow

The American Government In The Unlimited Emergency

LIPPMANN

ALTHOUGH on first impression it would seem as if the Proclamation of Unlimited Emergency must mean a still greater concentration of power and responsibility in the person of the President, reflection will show that on the whole this ought not to be and need not be the result. In fact, it can be shown, I believe, that the Government can operate effectively in the unlimited emergency only by a return to the true balance of the American Constitution.

This will require, first, the restoration of Congress as a legislative organ capable of deliberating and of deciding promptly; second, the enlargement of the Executive power by legal authority granted by Congress; third, the exercise of the enlarged Executive power in lesser degree by the President personally and in much greater degree by officials having direct and clearly defined legal authority from Congress.

THE RESTORATION of Congress, which is now virtually incapable of doing its duty, is the first item on this program and is indispensable to all that follows. The trouble with Congress is simple and obvious: under the rules of the Senate there is unlimited debate, which can be shut off only by a vote of two-thirds of those voting. This rule, which protects the minority against hasty and oppressive action by the majority, is one of the great safeguards of the Bill of Rights. But like all good things, it can be abused. It is abused when a minority invokes unlimited debate in order to filibuster for the purpose of obstructing the majority in exercising its right, after reasonable debate and subject to the limitations of the Constitution, to make decisions.

It is the abuse of the filibuster in the Senate that is destroying the usefulness of Congress, and causing the country to connive at the dangerous and most undesirable procedure of making a detour around Congress. If the Senate of the United States would by a gentlemen's agreement arrange for the period of the emergency to abandon the filibuster on questions of national defense and foreign policy, Congress would be restored as a coordinate branch of the Government. All that is required is that Senator Wheeler and Senator Nye and two or three others agree to debate their views on the floor of the Senate and then,—without filibustering in order to provide the propaganda machine behind them with time and opportunity to operate,—let the Senate vote on the question. If some such agreement is not reached, the country will be faced with the devilish dilemma of being paralyzed by the incapacity of Congress to act or of ignoring Congress and in practice suspending representative government.

THE FILIBUSTER is destroying Congress. Yet in a state of unlimited emergency it is more than ever necessary that Congress should exist and should be able to work efficiently. For Congress is needed to hold the Executive to account; it is needed in order to keep him informed; it is needed, above all, because from Congress alone can the powers needed for this emergency be properly and effectively obtained.

Greater powers will be needed than now exist, or can be instituted by legal ingenuity applied to the general powers of the President. If, as is certain, this Nation must double the effort applied to armaments and defense, then very much greater legal powers must be exercised over the whole national economy. There will be needed not only a rule of priorities such as Congress has now authorized but there will be needed rationing of many things. There will be needed power over prices. There will be needed enlarged powers to commandeer property. There will be needed a drastic curtailment of a great many civilian activities. There will be needed not only the ending of strikes but a great speeding-up of production.

THESE THINGS will not be done by proclamation nor by persuasion alone nor by the prestige of the President. They require legal authority, which Congress ought to establish as to the general principle, and they require lawful agencies of government to administer this authority.

Congress, restored so that it is capable of deliberating and deciding, should be asked for new grants of power covering prices, rationing, and industrial stoppages: the machinery for administering these powers should have the approval of Congress, and while detailed legislation is to be avoided as if it were the plague, there should be provision for regular reports to Congress on the work done.

BY INCREASING the Executive power, a thing which must be done, but by increasing it through action of Congress rather than by Executive assumption alone, the greatest of all the bottlenecks in Washington may be opened up. This is the bottleneck at the White House.

This bottleneck will, if it continues, be the undoing of Mr. Roosevelt personally and it will be disastrous for the Nation. It has developed only in part because Mr. Roosevelt does not know how to delegate authority, though that weakness is important. Nor does it come only from the fact that Mr. Roosevelt is too tender-minded to displace incompetent or inadequate subordinates, and that he carries them along on his own overweighted shoulders. It comes also, and primarily I believe, from the extremely unhealthy political atmosphere created by the failure of the Senate to remain a true deliberating and deciding organ of Government.

THE DEBAUCHING of the Senate's function by the abuse of the filibuster is the fundamental cause of the whole strategy of indirection, circumvention, and subterfuge by which national defense and foreign policy have been carried forward. As a result the Executive has enlarged its powers, not out of candid grants of authority, but by blank checks or out of the President's personal, vague, but large prestige and implied authority. This has meant that to an exceedingly undesirable degree, the whole defense program depends upon Mr. Roosevelt personally, that the men directing it are supported not by law but by their relation to the President.

This system, forced upon the Executive by the virtual breakdown of Congress, can never be satisfactory. For the directors of the effort can never be fully efficient when their authority is uncertain and their responsibility unclear. They can never be bold and swift because they cannot know what they have the right to do, and so the system produces hesitation and timidity, uncertainty and much confusion.

THE EVIL CAN BE cured only if Congress is restored—if a restored Congress then grants the necessary authority—if the national defense under the supreme direction of the President is then managed by men who have legal authority which gives them ample power and fixes their responsibility.

Thus, for the unlimited emergency we should not abandon our constitutional system but, on the contrary, we should as a matter of practical necessity restore and revivify it.

Light Tanks At 10 A Day

By Edwin Stout
Associated Press Staff Writer

One Plant's Output

Berwick, Pa., June 4.—The American Car & Foundry Co., now in full production here, is turning out ten light tanks a day of a type that had their first trial in Greece, where some are now believed to be in German hands.

Construction experts at the factory told a group of returned war correspondents today they believed the 13-ton tank produced here is as good as anything the Germans build of this type, and may have better armor plate. They are still waiting word from British authorities on their performance in action, however.

Army officers who took the touring correspondents through the immense plant said that the American light tanks also may have been under fire in North Africa. New shipments are being sent overseas.

This factory delivered 329 light tanks to the Government last December, and now is working on an order of 3,000 to be absorbed in the seven armored divisions the American Army expects to have by June, 1942.

THESE SEVEN armored divisions—probably at least eight fewer that the German army had at the start of the Battle of Flanders—will each need 287 light tanks, 110 medium tanks, 275 scout cars and over 1,000 other vehicles. The medium tank production is just getting under way. Heavy tanks of the German 60-ton model are still in the experimental stage.

The American Car & Foundry Co. took its first order for tanks in October, 1939, and delivered the completed vehicles 14 months later. In England, some Midland factories which changed over to tank-making when the war broke out, did not reach full production until last May, but were handicapped by demands for tools and material from other war factories.

Army officers who test tank armor-plate at the Berwick factory say the light tanks, in tank-to-tank fighting would not stand a chance against medium models which are twice as big. They would be knocked out by a direct hit from a .75 mm. cannon such as medium tanks carry.

BUT THE LIGHT tanks are powerful raiding weapons, capable of striking 150 miles into hostile territory at 35 miles an hour. The five men inside can keep two-way radio contact with field headquarters and supporting planes. They are protected by armor plate so hard that ordinary bullets, hand grenades and .37 mm. shells fail to dent it. The tank fires 40 shots a minute from its own automatic .37 mm. cannon.

Besides the cannon, the tank has four 30-caliber machine guns that can fire a total of more than 6,000 shots a minute. At close quarters there are two "Tommy-guns" for use from pistol ports in the turret wall.

Equipped with radio and guns, the light tanks cost the army $40,000, but in battle it is estimated they have the effectiveness of 40 infantrymen plus ability to dash at full speed over rough country.

BERWICK, Pa., June 4 (INS).—Modern American tanks have been lost in the Atlantic on ships sunk by German raiders, it was disclosed tonight by officials of the American Car and Foundry Co., sole producers of the improved light tank which carries one cannon and seven machine guns.

This disclosure was made by C. J. Hardy, the company president, and Guy C. Beishline, the district manager, and confirmed by Army ordnance officers directing tank production here, in talks with a group of American war correspondents returned from European battle-fields who are touring industrial defense factories.

The company officials and Army officers said they had no information as to how many American tanks have been lost at sea, but it was learned that 200 of the new type heavily armored light tanks with maximum cannon and machine gun installation have left Atlantic ports for Great Britain.

Society of Oldest Inhabitants Honor Five 'Oldtimers'

Five "oldtimer" members—all over 90 years of age—were honored last night at a meeting of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants in the Old Engine House, Nineteenth and H Streets Northwest.

Honorees were Christian Heurich, 98, "nestor" of the day, Alfred Heitmuller, Joseph I. Keefer, Charles A. Langley and John Henderson. They received congratulations from the more than 100 who attended the meeting, and spun yarns about old times.

Langley told of some celebrated Washington houses he had built, and a resolution was adopted asking the District Commissioners to change the name of the New Hampshire Avenue Bridge to the C. A. Langley Bridge.

Ambassador Winant's Mission

ALSOP

A QUANTITY of nonsense is being talked about Ambassador John G. Winant's mission in this country. It is variously asserted that he is the bearer of German peace terms, or a British request that the President take the lead in negotiating peace, or a secret, ultra-urgent plea for more active aid from Winston Churchill. None of these things is true. The simple truth is that Ambassador Winant left London on his own initiative, in order to warn the President in person that to delay further was to court disaster.

Winant has told the President that if this country does not soon accept full fighting partnership with Britain, the British will to resist will begin to weaken. It should hardly be necessary to point out why this will bring disaster to the United States. Only the British people, beleaguered, outnumbered and on the defensive, now stand between us and a Nazi-dominated world. With us as their partners, Winant has assured the President the British will fight on to victory. Without us, however, he fears they will lose hope, accept a negotiated peace, and leave us to face the consequences of our own indecision.

THIS OPINION of Winant's, which is shared by all the other qualified observers who have recently returned from Britain, does not reflect in any way on Winston Churchill's personal courage and determination. On the contrary, Churchill is pictured as ready to fight, not only on the beaches and in the smiling English fields, but in the squares of London and the streets of Manchester.

Nor does it reflect on the morale of the British people. The morale of the people will continue magnificent so long as their leaders continue to assure them they have some chance of victory in the end. But Winston Churchill and the little men and women of Britain are not the only participants in the great struggle. Churchill cannot maintain the fight without a government, and the British government is made up, after all, of politicians not very different from the politicians in other governments. They know the facts. They know that until the President is ready to order the Navy to undertake active shipping protection in the Atlantic, British shipping will continue to be sunk in appalling quantities, and that if the rate of loss is not soon diminished there will be no ships next spring to carry supplies for an offensive. They know also how threatening is the situation in the Mediterranean and how the balance there can probably be turned only by American intervention. In short, they know that Britain's only hope is from this country.

WINANT'S WARNING may be expressed, therefore, in terms of a single blunt question. Under these circumstances, knowing these things, what would ordinary politicians be likely to do? The answer is that sooner or later, ordinary politicians would be inclined to get out their personal surfboards and make a shot at riding what Mrs. Lindbergh calls the wave of the future. That is the ultimate, basic reason why delay may mean disaster to us.

The crucial importance of the time factor is the essence of Winant's report. Possibly it may seem overpessimistic, at this time, after the British showing in the last year, to speak of a sudden weakening of the British will to resist. But unless this country acts very promptly the British people may soon have to stand up under the worst blow they have received to date—the loss of the Mediterranean, the cutting of the historic life line of their empire, and the resultant destruction of a considerable part of their Mediterranean fleet. If that blow is allowed to be struck at Britain, no one can tell what the reaction may be.

NATURALLY, there is more to Winant's report than his warning of the possible consequences of delay in Britain. He would be extremely obtuse if he did not also point out that even if British resistance does not falter, the price of delay will be very great. For besides undermining British morale, every day's delay makes more certain the destruction of such vast strategic assets as the British Mediterranean position. And even if this country becomes Britain's fighting partner in time to prevent an internal collapse, the task of the Allies will be infinitely more difficult if every strategic asset has meanwhile been tossed away.

KINTNER

The lesson of the land war in Europe, in which many nations that could have destroyed Germany together were themselves destroyed because they would not combine, should be enough to teach the unwisdom of further delay. If the lesson of experience is not sufficient, the President also has the personal warnings of Winston Churchill. It is understood, on excellent authority, that Churchill has already told the President, in the plainest terms, approximately what Winant has come to tell him.

POSSIBLY the President will disregard Winant's warning. Possibly the White House and Winant himself will join in denying that the warning has been given. Yet the fact is undoubted, and if the warning is disregarded, it will be time to prepare to pay the price of weakness. The price of weakness in a Nazi-dominated world has already been learned by the nations paying the price of weakness in a Nazi-dominated Europe.

New Zealanders Did Their Best In Crete And Aren't Dismayed

Wellington, New Zealand, June 4. New Zealanders today weighed their part in the defense of Crete and concluded they did the best they could. Newspapers point out the decision to attempt to hold Crete was taken for quite other reasons than those which first sent an army into Greece. The Evening Post says:

"Treaty considerations and honor took our army to Greece in spite of military risks. There is no evidence that the same considerations were the motive in Crete—in fact, available evidence tends the other way. Crete, therefore, remained an island concerning which we could make a purely military decision. The alternatives were to abandon the island, defend it as a rearguard action, or attempt to maintain a permanent garrison there. Not to defend it would have been a blow to our prestige. There is evidence that the period the empire forces held Crete, delaying the enemy's Middle East campaign in one of the fiercest hand-to-hand battles of the war, will be of great time value in the eastern Mediterranean battle viewed as a whole."

The Dominion says: "New Zealanders are familiar with the adversities of circumstances which handicapped the defenders so greatly. In war great sacrifices have sometimes to be made in order that greater ends be achieved. But valor is not enough; it must have resources behind it. We must eliminate waste, practice simple living and put our full weight into our jobs in order to help the soldiers."

The newspapers tell how New Zealand troops fought rearguard actions in the retirement and marched over 30 miles across the island after the most strenuous battle of the war to embark on the southern coast, tired out and with the drone of German air force engines still in their ears as the navy took them from the limited battlefield.

There is no echo of the British press criticism of the venture and no questioning of the decision to defend Crete, it being accepted that the Imperials were overpowered by superior air strength and lack of sufficient air fields.

Last night Acting Prime Minister Walter Nash added 2,800 New Zealanders missing after the evacuation to the 2,200 previously missing after the evacuation of Greece, saying the majority of these men probably would be recorded as not reported, though some of them might still turn up. About 1,000 men arrived in Egypt, Nash said, and his news suggested that a larger total than the figure mentioned in newspaper dispatches had been evacuated from the island. He listed 786 wounded among those safely crossing the Mediterranean to an unnamed port.

Parliament, which assembles two weeks ahead of the due date to hear the story of the Crete campaign, will open with a secret session.

Labor Aims In Britain

Peacetime Plans

London, June 4.—A declaration of the British Labor Party's aims regarding postwar reconstruction was adopted by a vote of 2,413,000 to 30,000 today at the concluding session of the party's convention held in London.

This declaration stated:

"The British Labor Party regards victory as the only basis upon which the achievement of its ideals becomes possible. It is convinced that for the attainment of victory this purpose has an importance greater than at any previous time.

"MASS UNEMPLOYMENT is intolerable in war; we must make it intolerable in peace. Distressed areas are incompatible with a full war effort; the organization which removes them for the purpose of war must remove them for purposes of peace. Finance is the servant and not the master of political policy in wartime; it must continue in that relation when peace comes.

"The nation is fighting this war that it may live as a free people. To win it is to defeat the gravest threat the socialist idea has ever met. For socialism asserts, as Nazi faith denies, the intrinsic worth of man as man. By our determination to defeat the Nazi effort we are making the human values for which socialism stands clearer and more compelling to millions of our fellow citizens."

Today's vote on the Labor Party's stand with regard to peacetime reconstruction was almost as overwhelming as yesterday's vote on the party's declaration of full support for Britain's war effort, which received 2,430,000 supporters with only 19,000 objecting.

DURING a discussion on the memorandum embodying peacetime reconstruction, Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio, said:

"I believe after this war the United States will play a different role from what she did at the end of the last war. I confidently believe this growing cooperation between Britain and the United States, which will become closer and closer as the war goes on, will continue after the war, and I think they will tread the same path with us, realizing there are no longer two hemispheres, but one single small world.

"I believe they, with us, will help guide all freedom-loving peoples along the paths of peace toward new prosperity."

The delegates loudly cheered these remarks. Greenwood added that the British Dominions are as "anxious as we to maintain a partnership of free peoples and to work together far more closely than ever was the case before the present war."

SPEAKING in favor of the memorandum, Hugh Dalton, minister of economic warfare, declared that just as the British Labor Party was firmly resolved to win this war, it was equally resolved "to win the peace." He expressed the hope that even as many buildings had been bombed and burned, so would many old ideas and conceptions be blasted away, never to return.

He declared there would not be a repetition after this conflict of the great war fortunes which emerged from the last war and added that Labor members of the government and the British Labor Party could take credit for that. The Labor Party's executive committee, he said, had set up a special committee which is working out "blue prints" for the new Britain which will emerge after the war.

S. S. Silverman, a member of Parliament, objected to the memorandum, saying it should be reconsidered and recast. He contended the time had passed when the labor movement could be content with mere phrase-making. He argued that the memorandum should include a declaration by the Labor Party on the prevention of exploitation.

A Tribute To Lou Gehrig

PEGLER

THE REST OF US, or most of the rest of us, might well take to heart, as, of course, we will not, the fact that Lou Gehrig, when he came to die, was given miles of white paper covered with the tenderest tributes, for his obituary, principally because he was a decent man. It is true that he had been a famous ball player, and that if he had not been such he might have lived and died unknown beyond some little circle. But Lou was great with modesty and chivalry, a brave but gentle giant in body and soul, and you may believe that every tribute to him written and spoken on the day after his death was absolutely sincere. There was no discount, no restraint. The boys all gave Lou everything they had, and you could just see them pawing around on the keyboard for special ways of saying how they admired and loved the Iron Horse.

IS CHARACTER then so rare that a good man merits such tributes merely because he has been good? Well, what would you say? Who else can you name in yourself, in sport or public life in all the world, whose death today would evoke such sincere praise and sorrow tomorrow?

Now Gehrig's death would have commanded considerable wordage had he not been the man he was. He was one of the greatest baseball players of all time, he made many records and much money, and his illness was tragedy. But there have been others almost as great, if not quite his equal, and honest men and wholesome, too, who will be laid away with adequate ceremonies, whereas you probably have seen the mournful effect of Lou's passing on men who are ordinarily more than generous to the departed.

WHAT, THEN, did Lou have that others didn't have or haven't got? He was no baby kisser. He was a frugal man among men who sometimes ridicule frugality. His athletic greatness certainly didn't touch these people so, for we have had many great ones since the beginning of the era of wonderful nonsense. He even lacked a full share of that trait known to the sport business as showmanship or color.

I find in all the pieces written about him when it was known that he had died, as I find in this effort now, a fumbling and rather abashed attempt to honor Gehrig because he was a man of fine character, and this naturally suggests that the human race must be in a rather bad way.

The Lou Gehrigs should not be rare. They should be the standard human type, for, after all, Lou was a simple soul, with no affectations, who didn't have to work at being good and kind. He didn't even have a formula, but just lived by ear, so to speak, and, with the exception of one piece by a bumptious and inexperienced kid who criticized him in very temperish way for his sensitiveness about the disease that finally took his life, I do not remember a single line of print in all the years that he was playing baseball which spoke ill of him.

I DO RECALL that when he went to St. Petersburg for the first time with the Yankees and the club was coming all unstuck, I called this young, eager giant Tanglefoot Gehrig, because he had not yet learned to use his feet at the bag. But after I had met the boy, he could have played the bag in snowshoes and it would have been all right with me.

One night, years later, at his home in Larchmont, he remembered the name of Tanglefoot, and soothed my conscience by saying that he had been, for a fact, a clumsy number at the time and went on to explain how he learned his lessons from Miller Huggins.

Bill Corum, of the New York Journal, used to write occasionally of the time when the kid showed up at New Orleans for his first training camp, so poor that he was planning to live on about $10 until the paydays began and he was put on the pay roll, to his surprise and great relief, because his parents needed money at home.

GEHRIG was the same kid, devoted to his duty and absolutely without vanity, when he had been a star for years that he was the day he reported for his first job. He inspired others and made them envious of his fineness, but no man ever was jealous of him, and if he ever had an enemy I never heard his name.

And here I am, too, still fumbling in an attempt to find words with which to appreciate a man and a player, and coming to the end of the piece with nothing better to offer than something about character. That was what it was that made Gehrig great above and beyond his size and achievements, and it is no credit to the breed that so many of us are so unlike this fine man that we must stand in such awe of his simple virtues.

U. S. Sending Scores Of Pilots To Hawaii And Philippines

By the Associated Press

Scores of fledging Air Corps pilots are being sent to Hawaii and the Philippines, it was disclosed yesterday, for duty with the rapidly expanding air fleets based in the Pacific.

The latest transfer orders published by the War Department show that some 116 second lieutenants who have recently won their wings have been ordered to embark for the Pacific outposts in the next three weeks. The fliers are from Brooks and Kelly Field in Texas, and the Advance Flying School at Stockton, Calif.

The number of these assignments was regarded as evidence that air squadrons at Hawaii and the Philippines have been heavily reinforced in the last several months. Some authorities consider it possible that the number of combat craft now at Pacific posts runs into several hundreds.

There has been speculation that this expansion was preparatory to relieving substantial units of the Pacific Fleet for duty in the Atlantic.

But military experts generally discount this, saying that while aircraft would be capable of taking over some patrol duties from surface vessels they could not offer the threat to a potential enemy fleet which is offered by the powerful naval forces now on Pacific duty.

Rather, the strategy which dictated the creation of strong air squadrons in Hawaii and the Philippines apparently is based on building up a powerful, coordinated striking force of both air and surface craft.

For the Army this has meant basing a large portion of its available bombers, fighters, pursuit planes and the like on the islands rather than in the continental United States.

That necessity has, in turn, raised the problem of how to give young pilots actual Army flying experience in highspeed, complex combat ships once they have completed their work with the slower training planes.

Until a pilot has had about a year of such experience he is not considered ready to engage in combat operations.

E. A. L. PLANE LANDS AT NEW NATIONAL AIRPORT TO TEST OUT TURNTABLES IN FRONT OF ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

Officials Rehearse Opening Of New National Airport

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The National Airport at Gravelly Point will be opened formally in about 10 days—that's definite.

A sort of rehearsal was held over there yesterday, and gave a small group of officials and visitors a taste of what is to come. John Groves, the airport manager, wanted to see how the turntables on the apron, or ramp, would work, so he had Eastern Airlines fly one of its big transports on to the field.

The flight was perhaps the shortest since the Wright brothers first got off the ground at Kitty Hawk. With Capt. L. S. Theakston at the controls, the Eastern Airlines ship took off from the postage-stamp field at Washington-Hoover Airport. After a flight lasting about two minutes, it came down on a runway of the National Airport and rolled up to the ramp in front of the magnificent terminal building.

Capt. Theakston brought one of the huge rubber tires to rest on the turntable. Then he flipped his rudder and demonstrated how the plane could turn around without running up and down the ramp. Literally, it was like turning on a dime. The advantages of having these turntables will be obvious to the layman when planes begin coming into the airport as frequently as trains come into Union Station.

A month or so ago, President Roosevelt drove past the new airport, and, on his return to the White House, expressed disappointment that it was not more nearly completed. He said all that he could see was a cloud of dust.

Well, the dust was gone yesterday, routed by the rain and also by the landscaping that has been under way. Baby maples were lined up neatly on the flanks of the Terminal Building. Grass was sprouting on the islands that separate the roadways and also out on the field, across which slash the concrete runways.

No matter how much a person has read about this "dream" airport, no matter how many superlatives have been used in describing it, the first actual view of it now that the curtain is about to go up is a thrilling experience.

The Terminal Building, with its huge lobby, its north and south concourses, its coffee shop and handsome dining room, is an architectural jewel. All the doors are of glass and aluminum. They are therefore extremely light, and the ease with which they swing open is a delightful surprise. The postoffice in the terminal is larger than many postal substations around Washington.

The view from the promenade decks that curve around the Terminal Building is not to be equaled anywhere in the world. Beyond the field is the Potomac, and beyond that, in a clear panorama, is the Lincoln Memorial, the Washington Monument, the Jefferson Memorial, and the great dome of the Capitol.

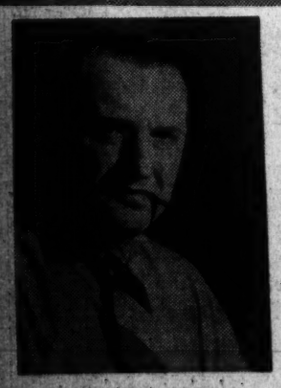
WASHINGTON GIRLS WHO WERE AWARDED DEGREES AT COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT TRINITY COLLEGE



By Bill Cunningham

Bill Cunningham's Column: Some of the Woes of a Driver With Wrong Tires

South Bend, Ind.—After a few practically sacred items, such as pew rent, life insurance or contributions to divers worthy causes, and such unslippable neck-weights as taxes, shoes for baby, and help for the inevitable and indigent kin who were already in a bad way when "depression" was only a noun in the dictionary meaning a topographical dimple, or a dip in a graph, a man's principal obligation to himself is to buy a good automobile. His next should be to get into it and drive occasionally somewhere a long ways off as they say out in this country.

Of course, that's only a personal opinion, and some other people might think they wouldn't like that at all, but if they've never tried it, the way cars, roads and roadside accommodations are now, they've a new experience in grins, and grades, and maybe, griefs waiting for them. Modern pioneering in Detroit's improvement upon the covered wagon isn't to be advised, naturally, unless the driver is strong, healthy and skilled at the wheel. It's not good unless the rolling stock is in first-class condition—and even then there can be places where it couldn't exactly be called good.

It's no good if a man drives at a crazy clip, or tries to keep on when his eyes and legs say he shouldn't. But, taken sensibly, even if at high speed, along these level ribbons of billiard-table cement, a cross-country tour taken just as it comes teaches a citizen much about his country and the various grades of his brethren, and it often as well does something to his soul.

A Word About "The Duchess"

If nothing else, it can be an exquisite experience in wondering what will go wrong next. Take my beautiful buggy, for instance. I drive, maybe I should explain, a car that was given me at a dinner and of which I'm exceptionally proud. To you, she'd be what the trade calls a "business man's coupe" of a breed in the intermediate price range, and you've seen her kind and her color a thousand times on the street.

To me, she is something individual and quite regal. I formally christened her "The Duchess," and the gentlemen of the Red Sox had the name painted on both doors in little letters of white one day when, with some pains at parting, I agreed to let them borrow her to take a little ride.

That's the only liberty I've ever allowed anybody to take with her. She's had only the best of loving care, and not even the Duchess of Windsor is slicker looking nor better groomed in the rotogravures than her automotive grace, in her pinegreen dress and her black and white shoes, who lives in my barn.

She has responded to this respectful treatment most handsomely, and although there were almost 30,000 miles on her clock as I prepared to leave for this locality, she'd never stumbled or stuttered and was as swift as the wind. I'd have bet anybody $1,000 (Confederate) to a pants button that we'd have whaled down this long pike with never a pause so far as she was concerned, except for the customary rations of gas and oil.

But, just to be sure, I sent her over to be reshod before taking off, specifying only the best and, likewise, the best looking. She came back wearing the handsomest black-and-white product of one of the world's greatest firms. Sports shoes, as it were.

Proudly I rolled her out and down the highroad through the traffic. Your foot gradually grows heavier and the needle starts its clock-wise climb. Gradually it's crossing 50-55—it's creeping up across 60.

All at once, my always quiet and dignified Duchess began to cut a caper so undignified it was positively scandalous. You could have brained her proprietor with a toy balloon, so complete was his incredulity.

A Departure From Decorum

She started to dance a regular buck and wing right in the middle of the public pike. There hasn't been such a shimmy since Gilda Gray first came out of Minneapolis, and Bill Robinson never picked 'em up and put 'em down in more impressive machine-gun tempo.

Positively horrified at such a breach of decorum, I whoaed her down to a walk, where her behavior was normal, and then gradually urged her onward and upward to the higher flights again, only to see her break again into this crazy sort of conga that shook the living daylights out of both her and her passengers. The gent with me suggested that we get out and remove the cap to see if the last filling station proprietor hadn't made an honest mistake and poured her full of hard cider.

Instead we slow-wheeled into the next little town and to a mechanic we found in a local garage.

"It's them new shoes," he said, after he'd huffed and puffed around. "They've thrown your wheels out of balance."

It took five hours—and have you, my friend, ever spent five hours waiting on a mechanic? I told you certain things about an automobile trip are, or can be, good for the soul. This sort of penance, for instance.

But the guy had what it took, in machinery, parts and knowledge. Yes sir, it was five hours, new tubes, 22 weights that look like elongated leaden warts fungused onto the four rims and 26 bucks ad valorem. But that did 'er, and I learned something about buying new tires.

Don't say a smart guy would have known such all along. All a lot of us know, or pretend to know, about a car is how to drive one. That's about all it takes in these times, too, despite what happened to me.

Practical, Well Fitting Riding Clothes Advised for Both Novice and Expert

Authorities Give Pointers on Choice Of Bridle Outfits

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

Horseback riding, the sport that is no respector of persons, has become a favorite recreation of young women here, from society girls to the $18-a-week salesgirl. Once considered an expensive sport, it is now within reach of the budgeted income group as the result of recreational groups and riding clubs offering reduced rates.

The proficiency of a rider has very little influence on the kind of outfit worn. Unlike a few other sports, a novice at riding is not marked by the perfection of her outfit. According to Miss Margaret Cotter, a member of the Potomac Hunt and an expert horsewoman, the fit is the most important thing in riding clothes.

In expressing her own clothes preference, Miss Cotter said: "The finest habits are not made so much for beauty as practicality, but naturally they are the best-looking because of their simplicity."

When women began riding crossaddle, their clothes became more mannish. They discarded the long skirts that swept the ground from the sidesaddles. Miss Cotter believes there is a slight tendency on the part of some manufacturers to introduce a note of femininity in the modern coat. Though there are no set rules, the accepted woman's coat is still patterned after the man's.

Prefers Gabardines

There is very little cause for feminine jealousy among women riders, for, as Miss Cotter pointed out, a girl may see her riding coat on someone else. There is no assurance that it is not apt to be copied. There is one preference Miss Cotter does have in riding coats—she likes the hard finishes, like gabardine, better than the soft, fussy ones.

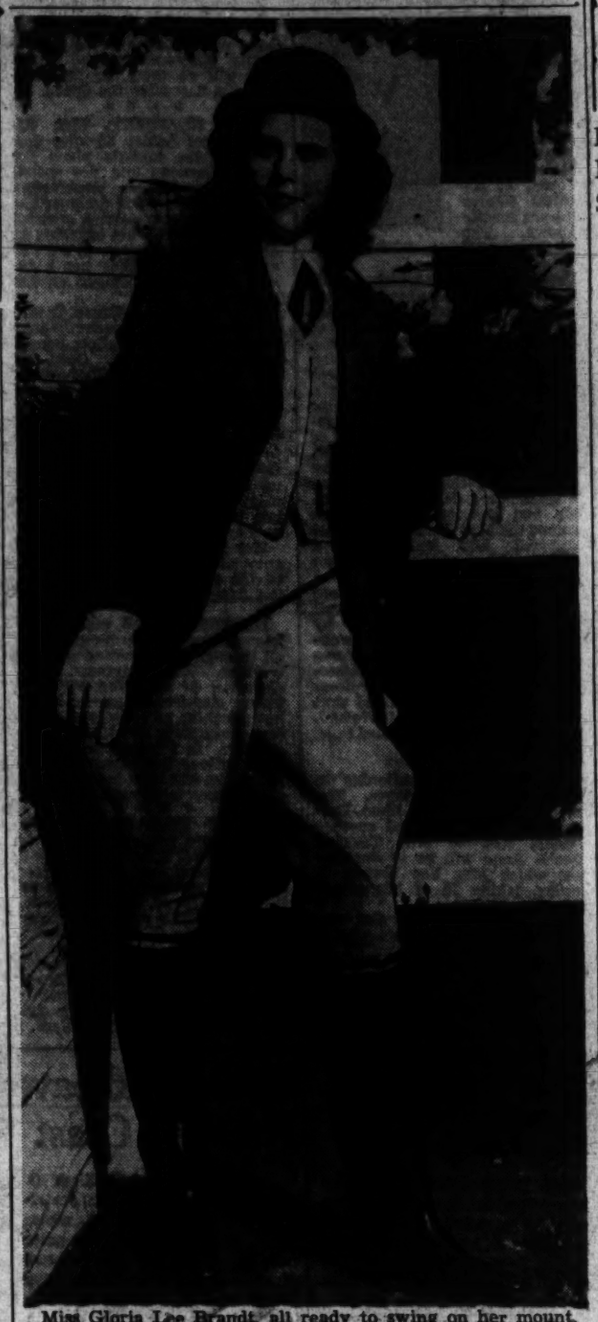
Miss Cotter, who is widely known for the way she shouts to her horse as she takes him over a jump, has been riding since she was 11. She rode her first pony at the old Riding and Hunt Club. Even then she wore the same type outfit she wears now. In the recent Washington Horse Show she wore a Glen plaid coat with light breeches, black boots and a matching hunting cap.

There are several rules to keep in mind when selecting an outfit. Well-cut breeches are usually low-waisted. Boots and derby match, as well as the vest and breeches. Jodhpurs and jodhpur boots are sometimes preferred by those who are learning to ride, especially if they do not want to invest much money. Experts point out, however, that these do not offer as much protection as regular boots in jumping or falls, nor is it as easy to grip the horse with them.

Dress for Comfort

In the opinion of O. W. Catlett, riding instructor at the Potomac Riding School, breeches and boots are the wisest choices even for the amateur. When jodhpurs are worn, there is danger of the stirrup straps pinching the legs, he says. He also thinks boots are more practical because they are easier to keep clean, but cautions that they be bought large enough.

Mr. Catlett would not overdo the matter of correct attire, however. He believes it is foolish for a girl to wear a coat in the summertime, except, of course, if she is showing. A simple sport shirt is appropriate, in his estimation. In buying breeches, he suggests that there be enough play in the knees. And, logically enough, he pointed out that a riding crop and spurs should be the last items to be purchased.



Miss Gloria Lee Brandt, all ready to swing on her mount, wears above a typical riding habit: hand-tailored all-wool chamois breeches, imported English tan calfskin boots, white broadcloth man tailored skirt with long sleeves, hand-painted silk tie, Glen plaid sharkskin vest, fawn-solor wool gabardine coat, soft brown felt derby, imported hand-knit string gloves and a genuine rawhide riding crop

Etiquette Tips For 'Teen Agers

CONSCIOUS of the critical little smiles of people around him—yet not quite sure what etiquette blunder he's made to cause them!

He doesn't realize he should remove his hat before sitting down at a table, wherever it may be. "Hats on" is permitted at the drugstore fountain but not in the drugstore booth.

Those cool glances you get when you say "Pleased to meet you" instead of "How do you do," "Pardon ME" instead of "I beg your pardon"—so often they mean you've missed your chance to know a delightful crowd.

That same crowd may welcome you warmly when you are sure of your manners. Out with a group, remember the boys don't haggle in front of the girls about how to divide the bill. "Men of the world" settle expenses when girls aren't present. And, girls, up to you to say when to go.

At dances, the boy who's popular says "May I have this one?"—not tactlessly "Have you got this one taken?" If the girl hasn't she may feel embarrassed. And the girl who's a belle says "I enjoyed it, too!" when her partner thanks her for a dance.

You're much surer of success with the opposite sex when you know the rules in our 40-page booklet, "Etiquette for the Teens." Tells correct thing when dating, dining, motoring, going to movies; on visits, parties, trips. Discusses petting.

Netherlands Source of Art

Holland and Belgium, as the Netherlands, were very important in the decorative arts in the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, reflecting the influence of the Italian Renaissance and the baroque trends. They developed hearty, abundantly scaled furniture, using deep moldings, intricate inlay, highly marked veneers twisted turnings, bulbous legs and bun feet. They brought to furniture its first feeling of comfort and homeliness and it was from them that England developed her first domestic styles of furniture. William and Mary brought many Dutch craftsmen with them to work in England and had much to do with idiom in decoration to England. the introduction of the Dutch Having Abandoned Unhappy Marriage, Woman Will Return to Teaching Next Year; In the Meantime, She Wants 'Really Good Vacation;' Where to Go?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My marriage is over and I am going to teach again this fall, as I did five years ago, before I was married. I would like to have a really good vacation for two or more weeks, in July or August. Will you suggest something? I am 30 years old and love to swim and dance. I can spend around $250. What do you think of a Caribbean cruise? Would the season or the war make it objectionable for any reason? What else can you suggest? I have worked hard and have been unhappy for a long time and would love to have a lot of fun with interesting people before I start my new life. I will appreciate an early answer. Sincerely, ROSEMARY.

DEAR ROSEMARY: So far as I know, your own idea of a Caribbean cruise cannot be improved upon. You can have such a cruise at a cost of $10 to $12 a day—and just now it seems to be the most popular of all sea-going excursions. As a matter of fact, one local travel agency reports a waiting list of between 300 and 400 persons wanting to take a West Indies' cruise in July or August.

Alternative suggestions for a two-week's vacation are: a visit to South America, a journey to Mexico, a boat trip on the Great Lakes, and a train trip to and through the Far West. However, if it is gala atmosphere and a sense of holiday adventure you want,—you probably will get most for your money from the Caribbean cruise.

Since part of your purpose is to "meet interesting people," it is advisable to plan reservations well in advance, after establishing a face-to-face acquaintanceship with your travel agent. Persons who serve the public in that capacity are sufficiently schooled in human nature to decipher in very short order,—if not, indeed, to recognize at first glance,—the kind of travel company into which you would fit. And if you stress the fact that you would be taking the trip as much for the companionship as for the sea breezes, the rest and the sense of "getting away from it all," he will make a special effort to book you with your own kind of people. May Girl Ask Man To Take Her to Dance?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been invited to attend a formal dance, for which I must provide myself an escort. Would you consider it bad form for me to invite a boy with whom I have had only a few dates? If I invited him, is he likely to think I asked him because I had no other choice? I have never asked a man to take me anywhere and I don't know how to go about it. I would appreciate your immediate advice, because I must issue the invitation soon. PUZZLED.

Acceptable Gesture, Between Friends

DEAR PUZZLED: It would not be "bad form" to invite any young man of your acquaintance to accompany you to the dance,—and in the case of this young man, who has favored you with several invitations, it would be a gracious gesture and reciprocal courtesy. It isn't likely he will think you asked him because you had no other choice. Since you "have had a few dates with him," he will think you asked him because you enjoy his company; and because he has, in the past, given you reason to believe that he likes to go places with you.

Don't beat around the bush in asking him. Be as straightforward as he is in asking you for dates. Just telephone him at home, and say if he hasn't made another engagement for such-and-such an evening, you would like to have him go to this dance with you. Don't ask him if he "would like to go." Take it for granted that he would like to go if he is free to go. Stress by implication (if not in so many words) that you are asking him because you thought of him first;—and not because you had no other choice. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Meat Glazing Adds Flavor and Beauty

There's a simple way of glazing meats, nowadays, that insures interest in what has been chiefly a chef's field heretofore. Meat to be glazed is put to roast in the usual manner, using a low temperature and no cover. When partially browned, start the basting process with any one of the whole-fruit nectars. The result is a delightful, easy-made glaze.

There's a liquefied fruit well suited to every type of meat, with apricot, plum, pear, peach or peach-nectarine nectar from which to choose. One of the regular 12-ounce containers holds more than enough for most medium-sized roasts. When sufficient meat drippings have collected, baste from the pan. A suspicion of fruity flavor clings to all meats treated to this delightful glaze. Ham and pork are especially good under this treatment. Add water as needed, if the nectar evaporates somewhat. Cover only to protect the roast from becoming too brown.

Furnishings That Brighten Odd Corners

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE ODD corners of the world are acquiring astonishing significance in this strange present. Odd corners in homes have taken on a new importance too. . . . They were neglected in those abundant years when there seemed plenty of space. But now, as events tighten the pattern of living and we find ourselves more crowded, we turn to those corners to see what we can make of them. We'll find, on inquiry, that there is ever so much furniture designed for corners—tables, cabinets, even chairs. And this is invaluable information for all those who have the job of furnishing a home of the present.

Mrs. H. Y., for instance, is moving and expects to refurnish her living room and is partial to eighteenth century English furniture—corner cupboards in that style are lovely.

Rug Will be Light Rose

"The new rug will be light rose with a dubonnet toned pattern running through it," she writes. "The sofa I expect to cover in a damask with teal blue predominating but the effect is not intense. For one easy chair I'm considering a deep dubonnet frieze and for a Chippendale chair a floral tapestry with grey ground and a large garden bouquet design.

The draperies, the woodwork and fireplace are painted white and can't be changed. The wall paper I've selected has a grey ground with a soft misty design that gives a plain effect. I have white Venetian blinds with dubonnet tapes. That's as far as I've gone. Will you give me suggestions and comment on my plans for the living room? Would it be all right to have a light rose and grey wall paper in the adjoining dining room with bleacher mahogany dining room furniture and a wood-rose rug?"

Design Effect Lacking

Our impression of the room, from your description, is that there is a lot of small pattern but no decisive color or design effect. But since your basic plan is good, this can be easily remedied. Be sure the grey wall paper really does give a plain effect, then plan beautifully made grey satin draperies lined back part way with dubonnet satin.

Add a pair of side chairs with grey satin seats (if satin seems more formal than you want, select a novel textural weave fabric in grey). Have another easy chair in the floral material. Then give the room sparkle with accessories of crystal and big pieces of turquoise pottery. For the adjoining dining room we'd prefer having the same wall paper as the living room—the wood-rose rug would be all right here. Repeat accents of crystal and turquoise pottery.

Washing of Trimmings

Many lovely dresses are ruined every summer because trimmings or sewing thread fade during normal washing procedures, according to the American Institute of Laundering. To prevent your dress from becoming unattractive after laundering, look at the label to see if buttons, trimmings, binding and sewing thread are guaranteed washable. Look at the seams, too, to make sure they are constructed to withstand frequent laundering, which becomes especially important during summer when perspiration is more evident than during cool weather.

Calcium, Aid in Staying Young, Strengthens Bones and Teeth

By Ida Jean Kain

IT MAY be much comfort for you to know this, but if your forebears got plenty of calcium you inherit a good chance of staying young longer than the average and of enjoying a vigorous old age.

You can't do a thing about what your grandparents ate. It merely goes to show how important calcium is, and to wake you up to the necessity of getting your own requirements. There must be a certain amount of calcium present in the blood and unless you get enough, your bones and teeth will be drawn upon.

In a way it's too bad that the effect of a dietary deficiency is cumulative, rather than immediate. You may go along for years on a calcium-poor diet and never suspect its connection with tooth trouble, a broken bone, or the early appearance of signs of old age.

Sources of Calcium

You'd be surprised how easy it is to follow a diet low in calcium. Most foods contain small amounts and such green, leafy vegetables as kale, cabbage, beet greens and water cress, and sea foods, are good sources. But to bring your intake up to the newly standardized requirement, your daily menus must include milk in some form—buttermilk, skim milk, and such products as cottage cheese and cheese. Recipes calling for the use of milk are also a good means of including your share.

But there are vitamins in this mineral story! In order to utilize your calcium, vitamins A, C, and D must be supplied in adequate amounts. That's why you have to have your orange juice and cod-liver oil or sunshine. If you take skim milk instead of whole milk, you skip the Vitamin A and should use one green leafy vegetable every day to make up.

Standard Requirements

The committee on foods and nutrition of the National Research Council recently announced these standard requirements for calcium: The average adult man or woman, .8 gram daily. Because of bone growth, children need considerably more. From birth to the age of 5, children need about 1 gram per day; from 6 to 11, they need 1.2 grams per day. Adolescent girls require 1.3 and boys 1.4 grams daily.

The amount of calcium needed by women is greatly increased during maternity. The expectant mother should have 1.5 grams daily and the nursing mother as much as 2 grams daily. Failure to increase the intake during these periods frequently results in loss of teeth and weakening of the bones due to the withdrawal of calcium to meet the needs of the child.

This list of calcium-rich foods will help you to plan menus that provide the full requirements for all members of your family:

200 Attend Mrs. Atwill's Party For Her Brother, James Cromwell

By Hope Ridings Miller

A BIRTHDAY PARTY, complete with cake, candles and a group of friends who took time out to sing "Happy Birthday to You!" accented the calendar yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Lionel Atwill entertained more than 200 guests in honor of her brother, James H. R. Cromwell, former United States Minister to Canada.

Scene of the fete was the Foxhall Road home of Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, mother of the hostess, and Mr. Cromwell, and from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock, a sizable number of celebrities was on hand.

Receiving at the door of the drawing room, Mrs. Atwill was attired in a floor-length black frock with a wide white eyelet embroidered collar and cuffs.

"And are you telling your age, Mr. Cromwell?" someone asked in the line just ahead of me.

"Not on your life," said the guest of honor, with a chuckle. "You see, I've forgotten." (In case you really care, he's in his middle forties; but he looks ten years younger, at least.)

Mrs. Stotesbury was not in the receiving line, but she stood nearby to greet the guests, and I must say she was as lovely a picture as the one of her, painted many years ago, that now hangs on a wall of her drawing room. Her frock of black satin, fashioned with a brief train and a jacket, had inserts of black lace and was worn with a six-strand pearl necklace, matching earrings and a choker of smaller pearls.

In the dining room a long table, centered with a tall bouquet of Easter lilies, was laden with all manner of teatime dainties. Taking their turns at pouring tea or coffee were Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mrs. George Pettengill, Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling and Mrs. Morris Cafritz.

All kinds of drinks were served at an improvised bar in the drawing room, and any number of guests went from there to the terrace, which commands a rolling sweep of green-carpeted lawn—once the scene of a Civil War fort. The entire estate, one of the loveliest in Washington, formerly was the home of the Ray Bakers (she was Delphine Dodge), and a number of those present yesterday recalled parties given there in former years.

Mr. Cromwell was busy greeting guests most of the time, but occasionally he took time out to chat with friends . . . and to answer all manner of pertinent, and impertinent, questions. How long did he plan to be here. He wasn't sure. He hoped he would be here a long time. "But that," he added, "depends on many things. In fact," he went on, "so long as the President keeps me guessing, I'll have to keep my friends guessing."

His new book? Well, he hoped everybody would like it; but of course an author could scarcely be the judge of his own work. The title? "Pax Americana?" What's it about? Telling all about it might take a little time, he said, but he hoped it would "go over."

Eton Cromwell Also Present

Meanwhile, another Cromwell, Eton Cromwell, of New York, brother of the honor guest, was holding a little court all his own in one corner of the drawing room. Yes, he liked Washington; would like to stay around the place a bit longer, but he'd have to be heading back to Gotham soon. Business, you know. "Will you fly back?" somebody asked.

"Not if I can help it," he laughed. "You know those planes don't have any handles on them, and I'm always afraid I'll fall out!"

Who else was there? Well, let me see. Mrs. John R. (Ma) Williams, having a crowd around her from the minute she came in . . . Justice Frank Murphy, in a corner with G-Man No. 1 J. Edgar Hoover, and both of them talking so earnestly everybody wondered what on earth they had on their minds . . . Mrs. Joseph Davies, a vision of loveliness in a black and white ensemble that featured a double platina fox scarf and a natty dappled turban. She was introducing around her house guest, Mrs. Harold Fitzgerald, of Palm Beach . . . Mrs. Cordell Hull, smartly turned out in a navy blue and white outfit, one of the most popular guests there, as usual . . . Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, arriving with Mrs. Arthur McArthur . . . Homer Cummings, gently denying the rumor that he is planning to walk down the wedding aisle some time soon (yet I'll wager my bank roll, such as it is, that he'll do just that before the summer is over) . . . Senator Theodore Francis Green, making all the ladies around him feel too, too fascinating . . . Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend being greeted on all sides by their friends. Incidentally, they'll be off today for their summer home in Schroon Lake, N. Y. Come autumn, they hope to stop by Washington once more, en route to their winter cottage, which is on Florida's West Coast.

"You're just trying to play up to a flock of Senators and Congressman," said Jimmy Cromwell to Lawrence Wood ("Chip") Robert, after the latter had mentioned he had just got off a plane from Texas and had come straight to the party without stopping to change his shirt." And just take a look at the frayed collar I'm wearing," he said—which brought forth the aforementioned quip from Cromwell. Chip said he planned to go straight on from the fete to the Virginia home where his wife is recuperating from an operation "and is now having the time of her life, riding horses every day."

Mrs. James Clement Dunn, in a natty flower-trimmed turban and dark blue frock, chatted on the terrace with attractive Mrs. George Sloan and her husband, who were up from Whitehall Farm especially for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Sylvanus Stokes, over from Annapolis, also were among those present, as were Maj. and Mrs. Joseph Harriman and Sol Rosenblott, of New York.

I heard: That Miss Carolyn Nash, who was among the guests, will entertain tomorrow evening at a dinner in honor of the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon . . . That Mrs. O. Max Gardner, who, with her husband, arrived early yesterday and stayed later, was to leave last night for Sea Island, Ga., to join Mrs. Walter George's house party for several days . . . That Ralph S. Snowden Hill was among those going on to the dinner being given by Mr. and Mrs. Myron Taylor last evening.

Washington Society Well Represented

Still others I saw there were Clarence Hewes, busily squiring Mrs. Claude Pepper toward the tea table . . . Mrs. Noyes Lewis and her successor, the present Lady Lewis, not 2 feet apart, and each holding her own ground with a flock of friends around . . . Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Bingham and the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey; also Senator Joseph Guffey, who was here, there and everywhere during the entire party.

Representative Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom were among those present, as were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, former Senator Henry Ashurst, Maj. Gen. Allen Gullion, taking the hostess aside for a very special whisper . . . Fred Roy, Col. Burdette Fitch, escorting Azadia Newman to the terrace . . . Mr. and Mrs. Sidney C. Graves, George Williams, Natalie Keeney Phillips, Miss Patricia Jarrett, Mrs. Sherman Miles, Mrs. Frank Letts, Mrs. Waggaman Pulver, Mrs. George Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, just back from a visit in Aurora, N. Y. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chetwynd, William Elmslie and John Foster, all of the British Embassy . . . the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Gouthier of the Brazilian Embassy; a couple of Pattens—I never know which is which—Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, and several dozen more.

Her Wedding Of Note Here

Dorothea Conger, of Staunton, Is Wed to Howard Eager, Jr.

Of interest to Washington was the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Dorothea Parsons Conger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Conger, of Staunton, Va., and Howard Eager, jr., son of Col. Howard Eager, United States Military Attache at the American Embassy in Madrid, and the late Mrs. Eager. The Rev. John Lewis Gibbs officiated at the ceremony at Trinity Church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown cut on simple lines under a fingertip length tulle veil which fell from a pearl coronet. She carried a shower bouquet of calla lilies.

Miss Vivien Conger, her sister's maid of honor, was dressed in buttercup yellow point d'esprit with a matching veil which fell from a cluster of purple larkspur. She carried these flowers and gypsophila in a lavendar satin basket. Miss Jane Conger, of Orange, N. J., the bride's cousin, and Miss Elise Curry, of Bethesda, Md., the bridesmaids, were dressed in apple green point d'esprit, wore green veils with topknots of yellow roses and carried yellow satin baskets of roses and gypsophila.

Robert Megaw, of New York City, was best man and the ushers were J. O. Tally, Robert Brownell and David Ford, of Duke University; Wesley Megaw, of New York; Frederick Gooch and Albert Loving.

A reception was held afterward at Ingleside. Following the reception the young couple left for a wedding trip to the North Carolina mountains and Cape Henry. On their return they will reside in New York City.

Couple Feted By Ruth Quinn

Miss Ruth Quinn entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon—adding another to the long list of fetes in honor of Miss Nancy Hoskinson and James O'Grady, who will be married on June 11. In the evening Mr. O'Grady was host at a bachelor dinner given at Olney Inn.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Quinn in Spring Valley was abloom with flowers yesterday afternoon between 5 and 7 o'clock. The party was a happy mixture of members of the young set and their parents. A bar had been set up on the porch and punch, as well as coffee, was served in the dining room. Assisting the hostess were Miss Julienne Cahill, Miss Nancy Rheem, Miss Margot O'Grady, sister of the prospective bridegroom, who recently arrived from Nassau to take part in the festivities; Mrs. Grant Boss, Miss Margot Mink, Miss Mary Ellen Degnan and Miss Doris Becker.

Among the guests were the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Hilleary Hoskinson; Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb and their son, Frank Holcomb; Dr. and Mrs. James A. Cahill, jr.; Maj. and Mrs. Clifton Hunt, Col. and Mrs. George Millholland, Judge and Mrs. Oscar Luhring, Judge and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Judge and Mrs. James Proctor, Mrs. Dulin Cornwall and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Macintosh.

To mention but a few of the younger set attending: Senorita Cristina, Michels, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels; Miss Betty L. Hutchison, Richard Hutchison, Miss Betty Burton, Judson Bowles, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley T. Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle F. O'Rourke, Miss Billie Byrd West, James Campion, the Misses Mary and Peter Norris, Robert Neipold, Robert Fleming, jr., and dozens of others.

Paula Jones Is Wed To Theodore Tripp At Chevy Chase

At a high noon wedding at St. John's Episcopal Church, in Chevy Chase, Md., Miss Paula Louise Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Botz, became the bride of Theodore Lawton Tripp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Stanley Tripp, of Richmond, Va. The Rev. Joseph E. Williamson officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. Botz, wore a gown of white faille, cut on princess lines, under a finger-tip veil which fell from a coronet of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor and only attendant, Miss Annette Mathers, an aunt of the bride, was dressed in blue faille, with which she wore a juliet cap of matching carnations and delphinium. Her bouquet was of the same flowers. Curtis Tripp, the bridegroom's brother, was best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home. The bride's mother wore a green silk dress, white accessories and a corsage of gardenias, while Mrs. Tripp had chosen a dark blue sheer frock, white gardenias and white accessories.

The young couple left by motor after the reception for Miami, whence they will fly to the Bahamas. They plan to return July 1 to the apartment they have taken on Somerset Place.

Pennsylvania Reception To Honor Grand Duchess

The Minister of Luxemburg and Mme. Le Gallais will go to West Grove, Pa., next week to attend a luncheon and reception in honor of Grand Duchess Charlotte.

The event will mark the American "premiere" of a new red rose named after the Grand Duchess. Robert Pyle, well known horticulturist, found, and probably saved from extinction, this flower while making a tour of European gardens shortly before the outbreak of war. It had been developed by a gardener who named it in 1939 for his sovereign, Grand Duchess Charlotte.

Polish Artists Give Program At Embassy

Climaxing a day in which every minute was taken up with a luncheon, tea and dinner, four artists gave a benefit concert last night at the Polish Embassy. A brilliant gathering of officials and residents turned out some 200 strong for the affair, the proceeds of which will benefit the Polish Hospital in Glasgow.

The artists were Roman Totenberg, violinist; Doda Conrad, baritone; Rudolf Firkusny, pianist, and Artur Balsam, well known pianist, who accompanied the soloists. With the exception of Mr. Firkusny, a Czech, the artists are of Polish birth, and donated their services for the evening.

Receiving with the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska was Mrs. Frank Simonds, chairman of the Committee for Polish Relief. Mme. Ciechanowska had chosen a Spring print in shades of blue and white and Mrs. Simonds was in black lace. The artists performed in the long drawing room at the front of the embassy and chairs were set up in the dining room and the smaller drawing-rooms. Later a simple buffet supper, featuring sandwiches and beer, was served.

Myron Taylors Entertain

The British Ambassador and Halifax were among the subscribers to the concert, and the British Minister and Mrs. Neville Butler also represented the embassy. The former American representative at the Vatican, Myron Taylor, entertained at dinner beforehand for the Countess of Abingdon, who came down from New York for the concert. She is chairman of Refugees, in England, Inc.

Among the other guests of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. A. A. Berle, the First Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Hoyer Millar, Lieut. Col. Townsend Hurd, U. S. A.; Miss Adelaide Whitehouse, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Winthrop Crane, Mrs. Robert Pell, George Garrett and William Odum, of New York.

Mrs. Truxtun Beale and Miss Craig McGeachy, of the British Embassy, were other dinner hosts before the concert. Princess Boncompagni brought a party of ten with her.

Earlier in the day the artists were entertained at a luncheon at the embassy. Among the guests were Mrs. Simonds and Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, chairman of the Paderewski Testimonial Fund. Mrs. Kellogg came down from New York especially for the concert.

Mrs. Simonds Gives Tea

Mrs. Simonds had planned a mint julep garden party yesterday afternoon for the artists, but owing to the bad weather the juleps were served in the drawing room of her home in Georgetown. Mme. Ciechanowska and several ladies of the Polish Embassy circle were among those present.

The Polish Ambassador's wife presided at the tea table, which was centered with yellow daisies. She was dressed in black with a blue flowered toque.

Many of the guests gathered on the porch, which overlooks the garden. The red and white roses climbing over the brick wall were much admired.

Among those assisting was Mrs. Charles Runyan, whose husband was a classmate at Harvard of Mrs. Simonds' son, James. The Runyans recently came to Washington and have bought a house in Georgetown.

Mrs. Sherman Miles chatted with Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller. Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister, and Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czecho-Slovakian Minister, compared notes on a sofa. Mrs. Vernon Kellogg was smart in a black tailored suit and matching hat. Other guests were Miss Adelaide Whitehouse, Mr. and Mrs. John McClure, Clarence Hewes and Countess Lasocka.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

NEWSREEL FACES will be a dime a dozen at the dance which Mrs. Frederick Sterling will give June 12 in honor of Anne Bullitt, daughter of former Ambassador William C. Bullitt. Along with Mrs. Sterling's Old Guard friends from Washington society will be dozens of political figures internationally known. The dance will bring to a brilliant close a season which, despite the war, has been as busy as usual.

Anne Bullitt

Bernard Baruch, who spends part of every week in Washington consulting with defense officials, has accepted his invitation. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who was Minister to Norway while Mrs. Sterling was presiding over our legation in Sweden, has been invited. The former Governor of Maine, Tudor Gardiner, and Mrs. Gardiner will come here for the party. (Mrs. Gardiner was once a Washington debutante herself.) Mr. and Mrs. James Mabon are among the New Yorkers who have accepted. Mrs. Mabon does a cooking column for a well-known magazine.

All the young Roosevelts were asked, but as they're pretty well scattered about the country by now, on service duty, they probably won't be able to come. Anne has invited many of her classmates at Foxcroft School, from which she will be graduated next week, and Miss Charlotte Noland, the headmistress, is expected to be present.

DINNERS ARE continuing to pile up before the dance. The Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom will entertain and another hostess will be Mrs. Truxtun Beale. Anne will go to the dinner which Mrs. Lee Warren is giving, taking 10 of her school friends with her.

Practically any June day you pick for a party conflicts with a commencement. The twelfth is the date of graduation at St. Paul's School, so some of Mrs. Sterling's friends, among them Mrs. Sheldon Whitehouse, of New York, have regretfully told her they won't be able to come to the ball.

Mrs. Sterling is making plans for the dance in between hurried trips to Newport, where she is busy remodeling a house she recently purchased at the resort. She will go there for the summer the day after the dance.

MAJ. SEVERSKY, Mrs. Seversky and Ashley Chanler flew here in the major's plane the other afternoon and are spending a few days in Washington. The famous flier and designer has just won release from a contract which prevented his engaging in aviation activities except for one company, and already has a design for a new bomber on the boards.

Mrs. Seversky, a Texan, is also an able flier. She frequently hops into her plane and pilots herself around the country. Once, on her way down to Washington, she saw from the skies a large crowd gathered at an airfield near Baltimore. Curious, she alighted and found a flying contest about to begin. There was still time for another entry, so she signed up and won the spot landing prize before calmly getting into her plane again and continuing on to Washington.

Her husband designed the first automatic bombsight and also one of the pursuit planes of which the Army thinks very highly.

DEFENSE WORK promises to keep a great many people here all through the steaming summer weather. Mrs. Raymond Lee, chairman of the Women's Voluntary Services, plans to install her daughter at some resort and then return to work at headquarters. In the past few weeks contributions have been pouring in and the office has been jammed with women who want to help.

HENRY VILLARD, who recently came here on a defense job, and Mrs. Villard will have a housewarming party tomorrow afternoon at their new home on Prospect Avenue, in Georgetown. Mr. Villard is a cousin of Harry Villard, of the State Department, and is already beginning to get his cousin's mail, telephone calls and otherwise encounter evidence that there'll be a lot of confusion between the two. Henry is the son of Oswald Garrison Villard.

Defense Mass Meeting Of D. C. Women Urged

By Lucia Giddens.

A mass meeting to promote unified action of District women in national defense and an antipropaganda campaign were proposed at a meeting of heads of a dozen women's organizations yesterday afternoon, at which a movement for concerted effort was initiated.

The group of presidents who met for tea at the Mayflower Hotel at the invitation of Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the Woman's National Democratic Club, named her as chairman and set June 18 for the next meeting. In the meantime the organization leaders will seek authority from their governing boards to cooperate in the program.

A sense of urgency prevaded the meeting, for all its outward calmness, as the women sat in a semicircle, talked quietly and sipped orange juice. Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, new president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who was a special guest; Mrs. Laura Waters, new president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Washington, and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, head of the Lecture Series Club, joined in urging prompt and definite action because of the gravity of the emergency.

The proposals for the mass meeting this summer and the campaign against propaganda will be acted on at a later meeting, after members of the group have conferred with their individual boards.

Mrs. Lawrence Martin, president of the Twentieth Century Club, suggested the mass meeting and Mrs. Shears immediately added that possibly Mayor LaGuardia, director of the Office for Civilian Defense, and Wendell Willkie might be invited to make the addresses.

Mrs. Raymond Lee, head of the Washington unit of the American Women's Voluntary Services, urged that something practical and immediate be undertaken by the woman-power represented at the session.

As an example, she suggested the opportunities to build up the morale of District women whose husbands and sons had been called to service. She said her organization had obtained a list and had the permission of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, District director of Selective Service, to "go ahead."

Suggests Formation Of Clubs for Work

"What can we do in an affirmative way to encourage these women to feel proud of their part in their country's effort?" Mrs. Lee asked, suggesting that the group yesterday might find concrete opportunity for joining in such a program. The women might be formed into clubs, she added.

Mrs. Clapper said a mass meeting sponsored by the women's organizations might be held outdoors, in front of the Lincoln Memorial, with loud speakers set up. "People would come to it in the summer," she pointed out.

She said that she felt so keenly the urgency of the present situation that she had contemplated going with a friend in an auto to isolationist parts of the country, "to try to tell on street corners what this country faces."

Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., president of the Washington Junior League, offered league headquarters as a place for the June 18 meeting of yesterday's group of presidents, and it was accepted. Mrs. Blair said that league headquarters would remain open this summer for the first time.

In her opening statement, Mrs. Shears pointed out the "deadliness of propaganda" in the kind of war that is now being waged, and said: "If we women can contribute a mighty campaign against propaganda, I am sure history will record us as pioneers."

The meeting cut across party lines, as Mrs. Shears and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, president of the League of Republican Women, discussed the proposal for the mass meeting.

Mrs. Forney There For President General

Mrs. Joseph G. Forney of Lancaster, Pa., first Vice President General, Daughters of American Revolution, represented the president general at the meeting and stressed the need for Americanism efforts to combat propaganda.

Other officials at the meeting were: Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, retiring president, District Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president, Washington branch, American Association of University Women; Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, representing the president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. Gladys Middlemiss, president of Women's City Club; Mrs. W. W. Sloan, president, Political Study Club.

Mrs. Paul V. McNutt and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis received with Mrs. Shears.

Folk Dancing at Picnic

Underwood & Underwood

Wellesley College alumnae of Washington gave a lilt to their picnic at Beauvoir School yesterday with such folk dances as this by Aline Munson, Mary Duff, Mannevillette Sullivan and Mrs. Jacques J. Reinstein

War Work Promises to Keep Wellesley Club Busy All Summer

The Washington Wellesley Club's season ended formally yesterday with the annual picnic supper held at the Beauvoir School, but the summer program presented by the war work committee promises to keep members busy straight through until fall.

Chairman of the committee is Miss Dorothy Sells, who also has been chosen to head the emergency service committee of the Wellesley Alumnae Association, national organization of graduates. Also reporting yesterday were Mrs. I. S. Falk, the club's representative at the Volunteer Service Bureau of the District Defense Council, and Mrs. Victor F. Hasenoehrl, who is working with the American Friends' Service committee. They outlined plans by which Wellesley women can do almost anything from learning to knit for the British forces to entertaining English refugee children living in Washington.

Knitting instructions will be given by Mrs. Anne Summerscale, mother of Mr. John P. Summerscale, commercial secretary of the British Embassy. Also on the knitting committee is Mrs. George W. Wassmer.

Lists of refugees living in Washington have been prepared and club members who wish to offer occasional hospitality or entertainment of any kind will be given complete information about the ages and particular interests of refugee families.

A young people's service committee, composed of daughters of Wellesley Club women, will be especially active. This group plans to help employed British mothers by entertaining their children with trips to the zoo, picnics and movies. Members of the committee are Mrs. Charles Z. German, vice chairman of the war work committee, and her daughters, Louise and Nancy; Mrs. S. Paul Johnston and Miss Carol Johnston; Mrs. Frederick H. Weed and the Misses Elinor, Mary and Jane Weed; Mrs. Arthur D. Elliott and the Misses Jane and Joan Elliott.

The girls on this committee already have seen service, for they maintained a "nursery" for British youngsters attending last month's acquaintanceship tea given by the club in honor of a group of English mothers living in Washington.

Entertainment at yesterday's picnic was a group of folk dances presented by eight members of the club under the leadership of Miss Aline Munson. The dancers included Miss Barbara Patterson, Mrs. John H. Pratt, Miss Vilette Sullivan, Miss Mary Duff, Mrs. Henry G. Bray, Mrs. H. Cochran Fisher and Mrs. Jacques J. Reinstein.

Mrs. Glenn G. Gillett was chairman of the picnic committee. She was assisted by Mrs. Laurence C. Staples, Mrs. Richard M. Watt and Mrs. John Pyles. Also helping with the serving were several prospective Wellesley students who hope to enter the college this fall. They included the Misses Betty Hirrichs, Eleanor Griesemer, Frances Goodman and Rosemary Makinson. The group was assembled by Mrs. S. Paul Johnston, who recently was appointed chairman of the club's acquaintanceship committee.

14 Volunteer For Nutrition Training Course

Fourteen volunteers enrolled yesterday in a class where they will be trained to instruct underprivileged families in proper diet and nutrition, with Mrs. Donald Hiss, vice chairman of the agricultural committee of the American Women's Voluntary Services, in charge of the course.

With the cooperation of the community service branch of the WPA, the group held its first meeting at the housekeepers' and demonstration center, 61 I Street Northwest. Meeting three times weekly through June, the volunteers will then pass on the instruction to families receiving surplus foods.

Meanwhile, the agricultural committee of the A. W. V. S. is urging landowners in the District and surrounding territory to donate their surplus of fruits and vegetables to supplement the the food now being given to needy families in the District by the Surplus Marketing Administration. These products will be brought on designated days to collection points, where the motor corps of the A. W. V. S. will pick them up. Some of the products will be distributed fresh to needy families, who will be instructed by the nutrition class volunteers in proper use of them. If the supply is sufficient, part of it will be canned at a central kitchen, Mrs. Hiss said.

Mrs. L. Corrin Strong heads the agricultural committee, which includes Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, sponsor of the subsistence garden project under the WPA; Mrs. Harold Marsh and Miss Marion Shouse. The following subcommittees are encouraging the growing of vegetables for this program in their communities:

"The Secret Weapon"

A Complete Novel in Sunday's Post

No Second Fiddle!

Some brewers think there are two kinds of beer — for folks with a lot of money and for folks with not so much.

The makers of Arrow Beer think a great beer is great on both sides of the railroad tracks; that all folks of any station or degree know their beer. You know a fine beer when you taste it, whether you've got a dime in your pocket or a dollar.

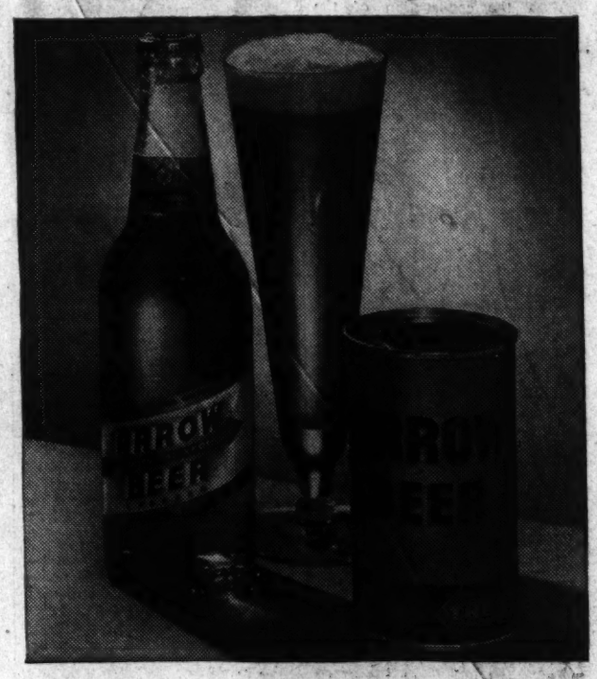
So the makers of Arrow Beer play no second fiddle. They make no second-class beer for second-class folks. You get the best when you get Arrow Beer. That's the way it is, and that's the way it has been. It's the tradition at a brewery which dates back to 1744.

It's perfectly possible to make a fine beer to sell for a dime. Arrow Beer has done just that by concentrating on one beer . . . one standard . . . one quality.

There are no fol-de-rols about Arrow Beer . . . no "dolling up" to make a bottle of beer look better. But there is a world of heart and brain to make Arrow TASTE better! No magic formulas . . . no mysterious ingredients . . . no "atmosphere." Fine malt, fine hops, fine brewing — fine everything. Brew-mastery, not brew-mystery.

So forget about fancy names, labels, and high-hat prices. Let your taste decide. Compare Arrow Beer with any other, at any price.

See for yourself if there isn't a certain "something" in the Arrow taste that's different! We believe you'll admit there isn't a beer taste in the world exactly like Arrow.



We think you'll see why we don't make any "second fiddle" beer — why we put all our experience, all our knowledge, and all our skill into one beer only.

Money can't buy a finer beer than Arrow!

U. F. W. A. Ouster Trial Seen as 'Purge' Move

An extraordinary step has been taken by U. F. W. A.'s local at USHA. It will attempt to expel three members who are reputed to have opposed the manner in which the union leaders have conducted the Dana Doten case. In plain language, it seems to be a planned purge of the opposition. The trial has been set for Friday night. A member said yesterday that the local has resorted to "Communist tactics" to silence opposition leaders. The three members charged with antiunion activities opposed the present local officers in a bitter election last fall. They are members of the so-called "right-wing" faction.

It is highly significant that one of the members up for expulsion is Anya F. Smith, who is the wife of Tony Smith, assistant general counsel of the C. I. O., which is the parent organization of U. F. W. A. In C. I. O. circles Smith is regarded as a "right-winger." Dorothy Cline, who ran for president on the "right-wing" ticket last fall, and Corienne Robinson, former chairman of the adjustment committee, also will be put on trial.

The trio are accused of trying to get Doten to withdraw his case from the union adjustment committee and to put it in other hands for direct negotiation with USHA Administrator Nathan Straus. Two of the accused—Cline and Robinson—are charged with sending a memo to Federal Works Administrator John Carmody in an attempt to break down the union case. A memo was sent to Carmody by opposition members when they got wind of a union plan to prefer antiunion charges against Straus. The memo to Carmody stated that if the charges were brought, it would be without the knowledge and consent of the local. The Straus charges, they said, had never been discussed at a membership meeting.

The three accused also are charged with giving information to the writer of this column. If the other charges have no better basis than that accusation, the union case would flop completely before an impartial judge. Bertram Gross, union president, was invited to give the union side of the story but he refused. He said nothing should be said about the charges until they are disposed of. Meantime, a board is trying to decide whether Doten, who was furloughed, should be reinstated. The case has been fought for several weeks and it has taken hours of valuable time of USHA officials. When the case is settled, it's rumored, the agency will tighten up on the employe grievance machinery to prevent the occurrence of a similar case. More than one official believes the union has taken advantage of the grievance procedure.

NYA Bill Rider Fought

Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee today will make a fight against the rider on the National Youth Administration appropriation bill which would prevent 3,600 NYA employes being brought under Civil Service by the Ramspeck Act. The rider is written in such a manner to prevent its being knocked out on a point of order. Ramspeck must try to get the rider out by a House vote and the chances of doing it are just so-so.

Chairman Ramspeck has suspended hearing on his retirement bill out of respect for Representative M. Michael Edelstein, of New York, who died yesterday shortly after attending a meeting of the Civil Service Committee . . . John L. Buntin has been appointed transportation specialist in the Agricultural Marketing Service. He succeeds the late James Cross . . . Treasury Secretary and Mrs. Morganthau will entertain Treasury officials this afternoon . . . Representative Martin Kennedy wants the SEC and Martime Commission to move to New York City. He's from that city. Kennedy says the building adjoining the New York Stock Exchange has been offered to the SEC at a rental of $1 a year.

And Stir Well!!

Topeka, Kans., June 4 (AP).—An Army kitchen unit, on a march from Fort Riley, passed out free doughnuts.

Capt. E. H. Spackman, in charge of the detail, was pressed by Topeka housewives for the recipe for "those lovely, fluffy doughnuts." The captain blushed, but finally handed it over: 300 pounds of flour, 300 pounds of sugar, 980 eggs, 15 gallons of cooking oil.

6 Mothers Ask Funds To Educate Shut-Ins

A delegation of six mothers pleaded before the District Appropriations Subcommittee in the House for $50,000 to educate Washington's handicapped shut-in children and after their statement was completed subcommittee members said they were "impressed."

The plea was made by a delegation headed by Mrs. Odetta O'Hara, president of the Association for the Education of Handicapped Shut-in Children of the District of Columbia, and came at the close of executive hearings on the District's $55,000,000 1942 budget.

As members of the subcommittee prepared to "mark up" the appropriations bill tomorrw, final stage before its introduction next week, interest also was expressed in appeals by other citizen groups for additional funds for new public schools and improvement in the District's health program.

Health Center Called Essential

A new Northwest health center, for which $20,000 for purchase of site and development of plans is asked in budget estimates, was described as "essential" by one subcommittee member.

"A lot of worthy items were presented by the many civic organizations whose leaders were heard by the subcommittee in the last two days," he said, adding that the budget appeared to have been "well considered" and that "most items were meritorius."

To meet the cost of providing municipal services for thousands of new national defense workers, budget estimates were presented calling for expenditure of several millions for schools, safeguards and extensions of the water system and new streets and sewers.

The "most essential" of these items in the "defense budget" can be provided within estimated revenues and at existing realty and other tax rates, a subcommittee member said. Without making definite commitment on the possibility that continued growth of the city under the defense program may make necessary expenditures not now forseen, the member declared that future expansion "can be reasonably taken care of" within expected revenues.

Calling the subcommittee's attention to 600 tuberculosis deaths in Washington each year and to the fact the city has the highest tuberculosis death rate in the Nation, the District Tuberculosis Association called for:

A total of $43,880 for the appointment of 14 attending clinic physicians, nine clerical assistants and two X-ray technicians and $15,217 for supplies.

An additional appropriation of $60,130 for expansion of the public health nursing service.

"Unless tuberculosis is checked in this community every individual and every family continually remain in danger of infection," the association declared.

"Cannot Fight for Themselves"

In her appeal for funds for handicapped children, Mrs. O'Hara told the subcommittee:

"Past appropriations have been insufficient to provide teachers for all children requiring home or hospital instruction . . . we are making this appeal to you gentlemen in behalf of those handicapped shut-in children who cannot come out and fight for an education for themselves."

Mrs. O'Hara asked the subcommittee for $50,000 for this fiscal year, to be allocated to the Board of Education. She urged that the program be put on a permanent basis, pointing out that on June 1, there were 59 children on the waiting list for home or hospital instruction.

E. Barrett Prettyman, chairman of the finance committee, and William H. Press, executive secretary, presented for the Washington Board of Trade requests for approximately $1,000,000 in expansion of public schools, the police department, Gallinger Hospital and the tuberculosis sanatoria at Glenn Dale, Md.

Three 1,000-gallon water storage tanks, one near Walter Reed Hospital and two in rapidly growing Southeast Washington areas also were asked.

Press told the subcommittee: "We consider that an increase of 100 men in the Metropolitan Police Department is absolutely essential at this time."

Pessimism Is Easy Now, Seniors Told

Clarence E. Pickett, executive secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, last night warned 23 graduating students of the Sidwell Friends School that "in these times it is easy to be pessimistic."

More than 300 persons attended the commencement exercises held in the gymnasium of the school, 3901 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest.

"It is particularly important that we should find ways of keeping alive the spirit of tolerance and friendship in these times," he declared. He discussed the work of the American Friends Service Committee.

Katherine Chase Marole spoke on "A New Beginning" and Peter Rawson Bickelhaupt, "Youth Looks Toward the Future" as spokesmen for their graduating class.

U. S. Employe Groups Back Ramspeck Bill

Larger salary deductions to achieve more favorable Federal retirement terms were approved by Government employe organizations yesterday at House Civil Service Committee hearings on the Ramspeck bill.

The measure, on which hearings will be concluded with a session starting today at 10 a. m., would raise employe contributions to the retirement fund from 3½ to 5 per cent to provide retirement for all Federal workers at ages below those of the existing law.

"We are supporting this measure because in our considered judgment it contains substantial and constructive improvements to the retirement law," Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, told the committee.

"We believe this measure represents the most practical approach to perfecting our retirement system that we could expect at this time," he added.

Optional Retirement at 55

The bill would provide optional retirement at 55 years on a proportional annuity; retirement on full annuity at 60 after 30 years service; retirement at 62 years after 15 years service and compulsory retirement for all employes at 70 years.

"We don't see where there could be any objection on the part of employes to compulsory retirement at 70 because of the optional features," Steward declared.

Support of the measure by the American Federation of Government Employes was assured by Charles I. Stengle. He suggested that actuarial estimates of costs of the measure are too high, stating:

"My experience has proven to me that only a very small group ever voluntarily retires."

The proposed 5 per cent deduction was called "only fair" by George P. Barse, of the Federal Bar Association, while William Horner, National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, indorsed the bill and asked "consideration" of a "conservative" widows' annuity.

Step in Right Direction

Fred L. Hawley, secretary of the National Association of Retired Federal Employes, called the Ramspeck bill a "step in the right direction." He said widows' benefits should be paid only in event of need and recommended exemption of annuities from Federal income tax payments.

Other witnesses were Peter F. Snyder, Field Employes Association of the Immigrantion and Naturalization Service; E. A. Meeks, National League of District Postmasters; John W. Johnson, Supervising Officers of the Railway Mail Service, and Herbert G. Kaiser, United States Treasury Beneficial Association.

Didn't Need Dream Book!

Philadelphia, June 4 (AP).—With the aid of a dream book, a Philadelphia court today mused over the case of Mrs. Willie Pennington, 40, who faced reality in the form of a charge of operating a numbers game. When the prosecutor read: "If you dream about a court or a judge, play 850," Judge Harry S. McDevitt came to life. Said his honor, "That's a nightmare. $25 fine."

Faces Death Charge After Ten Years

Police are planning to bring to justice in District Court this week a man indicted here for a killing more than ten years ago.

He is Walter Burnside, colored, 41, who was indicted for manslaughter shortly after Luther Jones, 30, colored, was stabbed to death May 18, 1931, in the 2300 block of Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Never arrested here, Burnside was not heard from by local police until he was nabbed in New York last March 27 on another charge. A routine F.B.I. fingerprint check established his alleged identity as the man wanted for the killing.

Joint Recital Given at Embassy For Benefit of Polish Hospital

Wahington Committee for Polish Relief presents a recital Wednesday night in the Polish Embassy. Artists: Doda Conrad, barytone; Roman Totenberg, violinist; Ruda Firkusni, pianist; Arthur Balsam, accompanist. Program of music by Handel, Purcell, Haydn, Schubert, Mozart, Szopena, Smetana, Faure, Szymanovski, Nin and Vieniavski.

For the benefit of the Polish Hospital in Edinburgh, Scotland, a joint recital was given last evening in the Polish Embassy by four artists who donated their services. These performers in a worthy cause were Doda Conrad, Polish barytone; Roman Totenberg, Polish violinist; their Polish accompanist, Artur Balsam; and Ruda Firkusni, Bohemian pianist, a substitute for Mieczyslav Munz, Polish pianist, who was prevented by other duties from fulfilling his intention to participate.

BROWN

On the international program Poland was represented by Frederyk Szopena, not unknown to fame as Frederic Chopin; Karol Szymanovski, Henri Vieniavski and Paul Kochanski.

Roman Totenberg, whose style of violin playing is familiar here through numerous appearances since his American debut with the National Symphony Orchestra several years ago, began the recital with Handel's D major sonata, and closed it with Szymanovski's "Fountain of Arethusa," Kochanski's arrangement of "Tonada Murciana," "Saeta" and "Granadina" by Nin, and a polonaise by Vieniavski. His admirable assistant at the piano was Arthur Balsam, who was also subtly adjutant to the singer of the evening.

Doda Conrad, whose fine sense of interpretation marks his artistry, was conventional only in Faure's "Mandoline" and "Apres un reve." Otherwise, his share of the program was very interesting, for he displayed some rare items. Not often does one hear Chopin's "Vojak," "Dvojaki Koniec" and "Leci liscie z drzeva." Schubert was shown in the unusual guise of a parodist in his settings of texts by Metastasio in the Italian operatic manner: 'L'incanto degli occhi" and "Il modo di prender moglie." Other offerings were "What power art thou" from Purcell's "King Arthur" and Haydn's setting of Anne Hunter's "Sailor Song."

Ruda Firkusni proved himself a pianist of both delicacy and power in Mozart's C minor fantasia, Chopin's A flat major ballade and two Czech dances by Smetana. He has an eloquent touch and a technique fluent in its ease.

'I Wanted Wings' Will Have Official Premiere

Tonight to Be Gala Occasion at the Palace; Season Subscriptions for Sale by Roadside; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT WILL OPEN THIS MORNING at Loew's Palace Theater, but the official Washington "premiere" of "I Wanted Wings" will be celebrated tonight at the 9 o'clock performance, when Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., will have as his guests ranking officials of the War and Navy Departments, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the National Aeronautics Association, the District Commissioners and others of importance . . . Loew's Cadet Band will play in front of the gaily decorated theater and a blimp flying overhead will herald the occasion . . . All this because the Army Air Corps extended unusual cooperation to Paramount in the making of the picture, featuring Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Brian Donlevy and the blonde Constance Moore . . . Incidentally, Maj. Bowes' amateur radio hour will offer a salute to Washington tonight over WJSV and the Columbia network, and Washingtonians are asked to indicate the entertainer they like best by phoning ME-5001 . . . The amateur receiving the most votes will fly to the Capital and join the Major's Sixth Anniversary Revue, opening today on the Capitol stage . . . Some 30 aspirants for stage honors will take part in the revue, plus the Rhythm Rockets.

BELL

The Hiser Theater, in Bethesda, Md., is rapidly becoming the chief local outlet for the British cinema. "The Voice in the Night," costarring Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook, of "Cavalcade" renown, will be continued through Saturday. Another British thriller, "Blackout," will open on Sunday. Conrad Veidt and Valerie Hobson are the stars of this one.

Those Holdovers Still Hold Over

With "Fantasia" at the National and "Citizen Kane" at RKO-Keith's rounding up a month each, "Road to Zanzibar," starring Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour, by a last-minute decision, is being continued at Loew's Columbia—making its fourth week on F Street—and "Flight From Destiny," with Thomas Mitchell, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn and James Stephenson, barges into its second week at the Little . . . It is impossible to go wrong on any of them . . . Two $300 scholarships at the Academy of the Theater—conducted by George Vivien and Dorothy Martin—are offered patrons of Loew's Capitol Theater by the theater, the Academy and Station WINX . . . One man and one woman will be selected on the strength of auditions, for which applications may be made by the use of cards available in the Capitol lobby all this week . . . But you have to be over 16 years of age to be eligible . . . Bombs on all sides of them may volley and thunder, but the D'Oyly Carte Opera Co. goes right on about its tuneful Gilbert and Sullivan business, nevertheless . . . Announcements of their bookings come regularly to this desk, all nicely stenciled by the censor for no valid reason . . . For two weeks, through May 24, the Savoyards were playing Edinburgh . . . Hope nobody Hessed them!

Imagine his chagrin, to put it mildly, when Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, received a call from the Third Precinct asking him what was the big idea selling tickets at the White House! It seems that some playful citizen, carrying a heavy cargo of wacky water, had swiped the sign off the front of the box office, saying "Box Office open at 1:30. First performance of 'Citizen Kane' at 2:30,' 'and had joined the picket line parading in front of the Executive Mansion. The sign now is back in its proper place. So is the prankish citizen.

The Roadside Goes Wholesale

Season subscriptions for either four or the entire six plays to be presented at the Roadside Theater this summer are now available . . . For $4.40 one may attend the complete roster; for $3 any four plays of the season . . . Tickets for both weeks of the opening bill, "The Mountain Limited," will go on sale at Mrs. Dorsey's bureau, in Droop's, this Friday, June 6 . . . Siggy Lane, the young singer who has scored a substantial local hit, is being held for a fourth week as an important factor in the stage shows at the Earle . . . If you can do with another word or two about Ann Miller, she has been forbidden by her doctors to sing for a month . . . Ripped her vocal cords practically to ribbons doing a comedy shriek in "Time Out for Rhythm" . . . Only once for the "take," but a million times in rehearsal . . . Now she has got a kick coming . . . And can she kick? . . . 'Way up to here.

Personal-Aside-to-the-Weatherman Note

Hope the title of the Earle's new picture, "Reaching for the Sun," refers to you.

One Way to Startle the Natives!

PAULETTE GODDARD

all undressed up in her "formal evening shorts," with which she recently set the supper room in the Hotel Miramar, Santa Monica, Calif., quite on edge. They were made of yellow crepe, so one hears, on which a floral design in brilliant colors was traced in sequins. It is doubtful, however, that anybody noticed that!

Boys and Girls Together in Hollywood

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, June 4.—The assorted romances of the movie beauties have become so complex that the time has arrived to set down the facts, as of this moment, thus:

George Raft is seeing the sights these days with Betty Grable. Dorothy Lamour seems to have forgotten her Army lieutenant and is back with her steady, the Los Angeles lawyer, Greg Bautzer.

Some of their friends expect Alice Faye and Phil Harris, the band leader, to marry as soon as his divorce becomes final. A Texas oil man also is courting Miss Faye. Her former husband, Tony Martin, is going places with Lana Turner, who says she does not intend to marry him for a long time. Judy Garland is being squired by Dave Rose, one-time mate of Martha Raye. Miss Raye intends to marry a Florida hotel operator, who is here with her now.

John Howard is spending his free evenings with the beauteous Hedy Lamarr. Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow, the producer, seem to have patched up their marital differences. Dolores Del Rio is watching over Orson Welles, who is recovering from a near-nervous breakdown in Palm Springs. Frances Gifford has separated from Jimmy Dunn. Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville have grown up and are hitting it off together. Errol Flynn and his Lili Damita haven't had a fight in a long time. They're expecting a child soon.

Jimmy Stewart, the soldier, and Olivia DeHavilland seem to have split up. Paulette Goddard and Charlie Chaplain have given no indications of an impending divorce. John Barrymore has been seen with May Mann, the newspaper gal. Elaine Barrie hasn't been seen with anybody.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, June 4.

Now that Jack Barrymore has come back into your life via the Rudy Vallee show, did you know that his father, Maurice, had as sharp a wit as Jack, and was even a greater matinee idol in his day? Maurice, English-born, loved America, and was buttonholed one night by another English actor, the Lord Haw-Haw type, who had made himself very obnoxious.

HOPPER

"Oh, really," said the pest, "these Americans—they cawn't speak or write our language correctly. Just fancy—when they use words like parlour and colour, they leave out the 'u'."

"Oh, I don't know," drawled Maurice, "when we use words like honor and candor, we leave out 'you,' too" . . . Incidentally, Maurice Barrymore held the amateur boxing championship in England during his heyday.

After Paramount sees Betty Field's performance in "Hot Nocturne," they'll realize that they have one of the finest actresses in the business on their lot. Betty, who can't help giving a fine performance, was excellent in "Shepherd of the Hills," but it wasn't her dish of tea. I'm glad to see she'll be teamed with Eddie Bracken in "Out of the Frying Pan." There's a duet I'd put money on.

Bill "Hopalong" Boyd looks steadfast, but is he fickle! He's never had the same leading lady twice, 'cause "Hopalong" simply must remain a bachelor. But the other day Eleanor Stewart (Mrs. Les Peterson) broke the precedent by going in for the second time as his leading lady.

Phil Ammidon, Eastern socialite, does it the old fashioned way, which has nothing to do with Hollywood. He's asked Phyllis Brooks' mother for Phyllis' hand. No, Phyllis and Cary Grant no longer recognize each other as they pass by.

Howard Huntington, of that famous family, and Eddie Groenendyke, worked their heads off for that air show at Santa Anita last weekend, in which Bob Cummings, Dick Arlen, Howard Hughes, and all our movie pilots took part.

On the "Father Takes a Wife" set, an extra pointed out John Howard sitting on the sidelines, and said, "He's got good looks, good health, plenty of money, and Hedy Lamarr—and still looks bored." With the conversation taking that turn, a stand-in nominated George Sanders as the most bored man in pictures.

"No," said the extra, "Sanders isn't bored; he goes to sleep right when you begin talking to him." He does, too! . . . Those gaucho belts Constance Bennett's sporting in her new picture are something! At least they are on Connie. But few have a chassis like hers.

They tell me Ty Power will wear the wedding suit in which he married Annabella when he marches to that Lohengrin tune with Betty Grable in "Yank in the R. A. F." I'm wondering if George Raft will be standing on the sidelines wearing the suit in which he was wed?

Leonard Lyons:

New York, June 4.

TWO ARIZONA INDIANS recently made a visit to the White House. When they emerged, the reporters descended upon them, and asked a series of questions, to all of which the Indians remained silent, unmoved and completely expressionless . . . "Haven't you anything to report about this White House visit?" the newspapermen finally asked . . . The Indians folded their arms across their chests, and their spokesman said: "The Man was in; the Woman was not."

LEONARD LYONS

IF CORDELL HULL takes a Supreme Court job, his Cabinet post will go to Justice Bill Douglas—who will then be in line for the Presidency. . . . Alfred Lunt will stage "Candle in the Wind," the new Maxwell Anderson play which will star Helen Hayes . . . Borough President George U. Harvey expects to be called into service, as a colonel, next week. In that case, Harvey will campaign for reelection in his officer's uniform . . . George Jessel's pact with his bride is that if their expected baby is a boy, he will be named James J. Jessel—in honor of former Mayor James J. Walker. . . . Francis Biddle, the solicitor general, is set for the attorney general's job if Bob Jackson moves up.

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD was at the White House on the day he learned that his play, "There Shall Be No Night," had won the Pulitzer Prize . . . A few weeks earlier Sherwood's broker had pleaded guilty to embezzling his clients' funds—including almost all of the playwright's investments . . . "Tell me," President Roosevelt asked Sherwood, "does the Pulitzer Prize include a cash award?" . . . "Oh, yes," said the playwright. "One thousand dollars in cash goes with the prize" . . . "Well, in that case," asked the President, "can you handle the financial responsibility?"

COUNCILMAN BOB STRAUS may be called soon for Army service . . . Burgess Meredith arrived from Hollywood last night—laden with gold and out of debt for the first time in years. He'll remain here until he finds a new play . . . Verne Marshall needs money—and sold a block of stock he owned in the Cedar Rapids Gazette . . . Larry Adler, the harmonica player, needed a radio script with which to begin a hoped-for series of broadcasts. He approached Arthur Sheekman, the husband of Gloria Stuart and author of the new play, "Mr. Big." "I don't want to set a standard which will be too high to follow." Sheekman told him: "I'm the right guy. Nobody can dull it up better than I can."

THE RAILROAD COMPANIES soon will have to face an unusual lawsuit as a result of the recent Supreme Court decision against Jim Crow trains. Because of that ruling some of the ticket vendors in the South have resorted to this practice: When a Negro wants to buy a $7.50 lower berth, he is assigned a $25 drawing room, and pays only the $7.50 . . . The sponsors of the anti-Jim Crow fight will try to eliminate this practice by having a noted American stand next in line, and try to buy another $25 drawing room for the lower berth fee of $7.50. When that, naturally, is refused, he'll bring suit—charging discrimination against the whites.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA is trying to solve a problem which will confront him in November. On election day, the voters will decide upon his proposed county reform—whereby a number of county officers will be eliminated. Candidates for those jobs, however, will run in November for the usual four-year term. And so if his reform is voted upon favorably, the question will be whether the offices are to be eliminated immediately or whether the successful candidates for those offices will be permitted to serve the full terms to which they had been elected . . . Sam Goldwyn reported to his wife: "I spoke to Jesse yesterday. I bumped into him, on the telephone" . . . When Eddie Cantor was shown a new, heavy honorary police badge, he said: "That's often a handy thing to have with you. You'd be surprised to find—when you open a window—that if you put this badge on top of your papers they won't blow away."

Kelcey Allen, the veteran drama critic, once was known as the demon salesman for the Clipper—the theatrical publication which flourished in the bygone days. It was Allen's unchallenged boast that he could sell advertising space to any person he meets. He once made a $10 bet that he'd sell an ad to a man sitting at the Algonquin—a man who knew nothing about the theater. "You can't do it," Allen was assured. "That man is in the shovel business" . . . Kelcey was introduced and began his spiel. "It won't do my business any good—advertising in a theatrical paper," the man protested. But Allen, nevertheless, persuaded him to purchase an ad. "Tonight, all over the country, there are at least 1,000 amateur and professional companies giving a performance of 'Hamlet,'" was Kelcey's convincer. "And at every performance, in the grave-digging scene, a shovel must be used."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 4 (INS).—The old wheeze about the man who went to the telephone at Republic Studios and when he returned the picture was finished, no longer holds good. Republic is getting the best talent in the country and spending real money—so much so that I want to go on record again as saying that this company has made the greatest progress of any studio in Hollywood within the last year. Now it's Miriam Hopkins and Judith Anderson to whom they are talking business. These two top actresses are being paged for the starring roles in "Lady for a Night" by Isabel Dawn, one of their more important movies.

PARSONS

Somehow I never took Rosalind Russell seriously when she said she was going to free-lance and not sign a new contract at M-G-M. But her contract is up in a month and she has gone to her home in Waterbury, Conn., without putting her valued signature on a new deal. Rex has done so much of her picture-making outside that I suppose she has decided she might as well make her own deals and with her boy friend, Freddie Brisson, as her agent, that shouldn't be difficult.

A cable from Ben Lyon says that he and Bebe are returning to America in August to see their families but they must return to England by October to continue their work of broadcasting to the troops. Ben asks if he can be assured that if he and Bebe come home their passports will not be confiscated because of the Neutrality Act. I talked with the British Consul, Erich Cleugh, and he said that he felt sure that the State Department in Washington would reissue a passport and that certainly the British government would do everything in their power to help.

Both Lupe Velez and John Barrymore put their X's on an RKO contract today for the untitled Kay Kyser picture. Now which of these two firecrackers gets your vote to cause the most excitement on the set? If you ask me, Kay and his band will have to give out with a lot of loud jive music to take the play away from either Senorita Velez or Mons. Barrymore.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Len Weissman, popular photographer, and his bride, the former Vicki Lynn, movie actress, have dated the stork for December; Bill Holden, on location, rushed to Brenda Marshall's side when he was told she had an appendix attack; Myrna Loy, in spite of the warm weather, just had to wear the new sable coat Arthur Hornblow gave her, at Romanoff's to luncheon; Carol Bruce has leased Geraldine Spreckels' Beverly Hills penthouse.

Laird Cregar and Peggy Moran have discovered each other; the reception Oscar Straus received at the opening of "The Chocolate Soldier" must have been very heartwarming to him. He conducted a medley of his songs which the orchestra played before the curtain went up and received an ovation. John Charles Thomas was in excellent voice and Hope Manning, already tested by Warners for "The Desert Song," is a real beauty and a fine actress. At the close of the operetta the whole company came forward and sang "My Hero" to Straus.

Leigh Jason with June Duprez a new combination at the rhum-boogie; Marlene Dietrich takes off for a short visit to New York before she checks in at Columbia; Martha Raye and Neal Lang have bought 5 acres at Encino near the Don Ameches estate; Ronald Reagan broke eighty in his golf game today for the first time.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Play Needs Of Service Men Outlined

So much is being done by so many organizations for soldiers and sailors and their recreation that the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation believes the public is confused about it. Here's the set-up, the committee says:

Inside military and naval reservations, the Army, through the Morale Branch, and the Navy, through the Bureau of Navigation, take full responsibility for the men's needs. The Red Cross takes care of the home service program and also conducts programs in the hospital areas.

Outside military and naval reservations, the Federal Security Agency is designated to supervise and supplement community activities. Congress is being asked to appropriate funds for recreational buildings where local resources are inadequate. These buildings will be manned with personnel supplied by the United Service Organizations.

This latter group is conducting a drive currently for $10,765,000 to meet personnel needs operating recreational buildings.

Also outside of the reservations are local recreation and health councils, organized in communities near camps. These work with the coordinator's field staff.

For civilian contributions to in-camp welfare and recreation the citizens committee for the Army and Navy is the official organization. It receives and coordinates offers of entertainment and other services for use in camps, it was said.

Camp Sold, Bund Group Gives Up Charter

Trenton, N. J., June 4 (AP).—Four stormy years of waving swastikas and resounding heils at Camp Nordland ended today with sale of the camp and surrender of the charter of the German-American Bund auxiliary.

Counsel for the bund disclosed that the auxiliary, operators of the 203-acre tract at Andover, had sold the camp for $23,500 to 217 individual mortgagees and then returned its charter to the Secretary of State.

Sewell Replaces Haney as Browns' Manager

Cleveland Coach Gets St. Louis Job

Old-Time Catcher Signed for Rest Of Season; Move Is Unexpected

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 4.—President Don Barnes of the St. Louis Browns announced tonight Fred Haney was being replaced as manager of the club by Luke Sewell, Cleveland coach.

Sewell will take charge of the team tomorrow.

He was signed to a contract covering the remainder of this season and all of next year, Barnes said. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Although a change of managers had been rumored for some time, the announcement—Barnes notified the press himself—came as somewhat of a surprise less than two hours after the Browns had won their second straight game from Washington to move out of the cellar into seventh place.

No Comment Made

President Barnes said he did not care to comment on the poor showing of the club thus far.

Haney took the helm in 1939 and the Browns that year set a doleful record that was despairing even for a team familiar with basement environment. The club won only 43 games while dropping 111.

That was the year also of the big trade—Buck Newson and three players to Detroit for four pitchers, an outfielder and an infielder.

Last season ended with the Browns in sixth place after they had edged into first division for a brief spell in midseason—becoming known as the giant-killers for their consistent thumping of such upper bracket teams as Cleveland and New York.

Pitching, said Haney, would lift the Browns to the first division, but it failed. When the pitching was good the hitting was terrible, and vice versa.

A former third baseman, Haney wound up his active playing career with Hollywood on the Pacific Coast and became manager of Toledo of the American Association in 1935. He came to the Browns from Toledo.

Sewell broke into organized baseball with the Indians in 1921, coming directly from the University of Alabama campus. Except for a few weeks that summer with Columbus of the American Association, he has been in the major leagues since.

Was Here 2 Years

He was Cleveland's first-string catcher until 1933 when he was traded to Washington for Catcher Roy Spencer. He went to the Chicago White Sox in 1935 and stayed until released at the close of the 1938 season.

After being hired and released by Brooklyn, he joined the Tribe as a player-coach and caught a few games in 1939. He has been off the active list since.

Sewell was prominently mentioned as a successor to Manager Oscar Vitt here last winter. Bradley later commented that in fairness to Sewell, who had been one of Vitt's coaches during the turbulent 1940 campaign, he could not offer him the job.

"Luke is too good a fellow to put in a spot like that," the president commented.

Chisox' Lee Gives 5 Hits, Beats A's, 6-1

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 4.—The Chicago White Sox celebrated "Connie Mack night" by walloping his Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 1, behind the 5-hit pitching of Thornton Lee tonight.

A crowd of 32,659 turned out for the pregame ceremony honoring Philadelphia's 78-year-old baseball patriarch. Mack was presented a watch and a gold plaque by the Chicago club.

But the Sox, now only one game behind front-running Cleveland, pulled no punches after the game started. Lee, never in trouble, hung up his seventh victory of the season. The Athletics' lone run came on Bob Johnson's eleventh home run in the sixth inning. Lee yielded no more than one hit in any single inning, walked two batters and struck out five.

Browns Push Nats Back Into Cellar, 7-4

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, June 4.—Thump! The Nats fell into the cellar this afternoon!! Fact is, they were pushed. The Browns stole up from behind, conked the Washington athletes with a four-run sock in the seventh inninng, and dumped them into eighth place.

The score was 7 to 4.

The Nats really butched this one. They had a 4-to-3 lead going into the seventh inning when Arnold Anderson, and what is known sometimes as his supporting cast, made a mess of the inning from a Washington viewpoint. The box score shows no errors for the Nats, but don't you believe it.

Firstbaseman George Archie inspired the Browns' big seventh inning with a wild throw to second base, and big Anderson, who wasn't so hot himself, got little support either from Left Fielder George Case, who coaxed an ordinary single by Johnny Berardino into an important three-run triple.

Bucky Was Desperate

Anderson, and Alex Carrasquel, who pitched the last inning, gave up only eight hits to the Browns, but there was also the matter of six walks and a wild pitch by Anderson. In desperation, Bucky Harris was turning to his big rookie as a starting pitcher.

The Nats also made eight hits, off left-handed Fred Ostermueller and Jack Kramer. Ostermueller was removed for a pinch hitter in the sixth, and Kramer pitched shut-out ball thereafter.

Jimmy Bloodworth was the only Washington athlete to collect more than a single and he figured in half of the Nats' runs. His second-inning double led to one run, and in the sixth he authored his first home run of the season—a clout atop the right-field roof with the bases empty.

Ferrell Brings One In

A tainted run put the Nats in front, 1-0, in the second inning. Bloodworth doubled to right center, and with two out, Pofahl's grounder took a freak hop over Clift's head for a single. The Browns tied the score at 1-1 on Ferrells single, a sacrifice and Lucadellos single to right.

The Nats set Anderson up in a 3-1 lead in the fifth after Pofahl beat out a hit to Clift. Anderson sacrificed and Case drew a walk.

Drafted Men Use Strategy in Getting New-Type Pants

By the Associated Press

Camp Lee, Va., June 4.—Drafted men at this Army replacement center are sliding out of those old uncomfortable World War style pegleg wrap-legging breeches.

On the baseball field spectators noted that some of the players kept sliding into base even when they were in no danger of being thrown out.

Quartermaster Headquarters figured it out. About 200 applications for new trousers—the new straight-leg type—were received in a period of several days.

Applicants were all wearers of the old type—and all baseball players.

Simple Rites Held For Lou Gehrig

Only Those Who Loved Him Best Present at Episcopalian Services

By the Associated Press

New York, June 4.—As it had been in life, so it was in death for Lou Gehrig today—a simple, unpretentious farewell from a small group of those who loved him best.

No crowds, no police escorts, no music, no eulogy marked the funeral of the great "Iron Horse" of baseball, first baseman of the New York Yankees for 14 years. The church services consisted of a prayer and reading of the Episcopalian funeral service.

Rain fell steadily but gently, making the morning cool and fragrant as 250 curious spectators huddled in little knots outside Christ Episcopal Church, a block from Gehrig's home.

It was a lovely scene in the Riverdale section of the Bronx, miles from Yankee Stadium, the subways and the noises of the big town. Inside the intimate little brick chapel the altar was banked solidly with flowers, some of the floral pieces 8 feet high. Gehrig's wasted body was in a closed mahogany casket covered with a spray of red roses.

Fewer than 100 persons were in the church, half filling it. They were relatives and friends of Gehrig, mostly baseball people who had known "Columbia Lou" when he was piling up his slugging records and his incomparable playing record of 2,130 consecutive, American League games.

President William Harridge of the American League, President Ford Frick of the National League, Leslie M. O'Connor, secretary to K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball; Edward G. Barrow, president of the Yankees; Manager William Terry and Secretary Edward Brannick of the Giants; Eddie Collins, general manager of the Boston Red Sox; Thomas Richardson, president of the Eastern League; George Ruppert, vice president and a trustee of the Yankees; George Weiss, manager of the Yankee farm system; several of their wives, were there.

In front sat the widow, Mrs. Eleanor Gehrig, her mother and brother, and Lou's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gehrig.

The services lasted less than ten minutes. The Rev. Gerald Barry, pastor of the church, read the Episcopalian ritual and intoned a prayer. Then he said:

"Frequently it is the custom to deliver an address at a funeral, but it is the wish of the bereaved that this be not done. I am requested to say simply that there will be no eulogy because you all knew him."

Whirlaway In Scintillating Turf Workout

By the United Press

New York, June 4.—Whirlaway took his last hard workout for the impending Belmont Stakes today and when he stopped running all the clockers on the grounds hustled off to the nearest jeweler to be reassured that their stop-watches hadn't gone completely wild.

Incredible though it may seem, the diminutive chestnut from Calumet Farm sped a full mile and a quarter in 2:02 2-5—faster than the majority of horses win races at that distance and faster than any horse has worked in a number of years.

The official breakdown of the feat, accomplished with Jockey Wendell Eads in the saddle and 118 pounds up on a good track early this morning, was: 0:12, 0:23 3-5, 0:35, 0:46 4-5, 0:58 3-5, 1:11 1-5, 1:24, 1:36 2-5, 1:49 3-5 and the 2:02 2-5. Whirlaway broke at the mile and a furlong pole on the main track with blinkers on while a light rain was falling.

Johnson Wins, Braves Drop Cards to 2d

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 4.—Art Johnson, rookie southpaw from nearby Arlington, dropped the St. Louis Cardinals down into second place today by holding them to nine scattered hits as the Braves belted Harry Gumbert for a 4-2 victory. It was Gumbert's first setback in the five starts he has made since the Cards obtained him from the Giants.

The Braves opened in lusty fashion and scored twice in the first inning after filling the bases on a single and two errors. Sebby Sisti tallied the first counter after Eddie Miller flied out to left and Johnny Cooney romped in from third when 'Bama Rowell connected safely.

Rowell scored from third in the fourth inning as Phil Masi drove into a double play and the Braves collected their final run in the seventh, when Maxie West brought in Cooney from second base. The Braves pounded Gumbert for 11 hits, three by Rowell, who tripled with none on and two out in the sixth and was stranded as Masi grounded out.

While dropping out of the first-place tie with the idle Dodgers, the Cardinals were shut out until the sixth when, with two out, Enos Slaughter beat out a bunt. Rookie Frank Crespi then doubled to left and Slaughter was able to score on West's feeble throw to the plate. With the throw-in, Crespi raced from second and, trying to round third, collided with Sisti. The latter was charged with interference and the runner was called in to provide the Cards with their other run.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, June 4.—This city is a festering wound on the face of major league baseball from a gate receipt standpoint, and the two big leagues are in a mood to do something about it. Actually, there is something of a race between the American and National Leagues to get out of town.

POVICH

Both leagues are casting covetous eyes at Kansas City where they'd like to plant their St. Louis franchise. Such a transfer would preserve the sectional make-up of the league. But it is not a step that can be taken easily. Whichever big league went into Kansas City would first have to appease the American Association which has certain rights of territorial integrity and would be losing its most profitable member. A vast cash settlement would have to be bestowed on the American Association as recompense.

That St. Louis won't support two big league clubs has long been evident, and there is more than a suspicion that the town won't support even one major league team. The disinterest in baseball here is appalling. Today, fewer than 1,000 fans paid to see the Nats and the Browns, and teams visiting St. Louis are fortunate to break even on their expenses.

Even night ball, which was supposed to needle baseball interest here, has not produced any such effect. Only 3,058 saw the night game between the Nats and Browns this week.

Sponge on Rest of League

The two St. Louis clubs have, for years, been sponging on the rest of the league, seemingly content to get by on the money they receive as the visiting club's share in the seven other cities of each league. Up in Brooklyn this week, the Cardinals, who cannot draw peanuts at home, profited very handsomely. The Cardinals reaped the visitors' share of the profits from an attendance of 102,384 Brooklyn fans who saw their five games with the Dodgers. At home, the Cardinals had drawn only 45,000 more fans in 22 games, including a Sunday doubleheader, the opening game of the season, and two night contests.

There can be no alibi for St. Louis on the score that the town is demanding better baseball before the citizens will support their clubs. Apparently there are only so many gamegoers in the city, because the Cardinals, as league leaders this season, drew few more fans at home than last season when they were buried deep in the second division at this point in the race.

The town is spoiled rotten in a baseball way, to be blunt about it. It was here that the synthetic doubleheader was created and pursued to the point where single weekday games left fans thinking they were getting little for their money. In their greed to capitalize on Sunday doubleheaders, the front offices of both the Cardinals and the Browns succeeded in making only a weekend baseball town and not such a hot one at that.

Other Clubs Supported the Browns

It hasn't helped either, that the Cardinals have been selling off their stars almost as soon as the citizens began to appreciate them. The sale of Dizzy Dean and Joe Medwick when they were at the peak of their careers outraged the good burghers of St. Louis and those few who were still going to the Cards' games became greatly disinterested in the club.

The Yankees and Tigers have been seeking to discourage the synthetic doubleheaders in the American League, taking the long-range view that weekday ball, which had been the foundation of the majors' success, would be utterly ruined financially. It was the practice to schedule an open date after a night game and thus pave the way for a future doubleheader, but the Yanks and Tigers, exercising their prerogatives, insist on playing the afternoon following night games.

The Browns' ownership has been quoted as saying that it

Sheriff Culkin Finishes Third in Swift Stakes; Victor Pays $28.70 Mutuel

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., June 4.—Ogden Phipp's King Cole was given another chance to atone for recent disappointments here today, but the bay colt splashed home second to Victor Emanuel's Omission in the forty-first Swift Stakes of 7 furlongs. Omission, under one of Conn McCreary's typical waiting rides, finished in 1:25 3-5 over a track that retained a firm bottom and paid off at $28.70 for $2.

King Cole beat H. L. Myer's Sheriff Culkin, an entry with Richmond, by two lengths, with Quakertown fourth in a field reduced to eight by the withdrawal of Harvard Square. The winning owner received $5,925 in purse money.

The most unpleasant weather of the meeting drew the smallest crowd of the New York season. Only 7,275 hardy souls braved the driving rain.

Omission has won two of his three races this season. He began his 1941 campaign with a stakes score at Bowie over a muddy track. The son of Jock gave Jockey McCreary a double, placing the latter, temporily at least, one up on Alfred Robertson for the riding leadership of the current meeting.

Sheriff Culkin led the field of 3-year-olds into the last furlong, with King Cole the runner-up. Meanwhile, McCreary had Omission next to last in the early stages. The Emanuel colorbearer began to gain around the bend and, closing with a remarkable burst of speed through the stretch, wore down the leaders to win going away.

Reds Sign Shokes, Duke U. Star

Cincinnati, June 4 (AP).—The World Champion Cincinnati Reds today signed Eddie Shokes, star Duke University first baseman and, to make room for him on the roster, assigned the contract of Johnny Hutchings, sophomore right-handed hurler, to Birmingham of the Southern Association.

General Manager Warren C. Giles said Shokes, who graduated this year, would report immediately in Philadelphia, travel with the club for a few days, then likely be sent to the minors for seasoning.

Terms of the rookie's contract were not disclosed but Giles said he had been given a "large bonus."

Mrs. Davy's Birdies Beat Mrs. Brandon; Mrs. Meckley Meets Mrs. Peabody Today

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. T. F. Neblett's bid to add the District Women's Championship to her Southern titles was stopped by Mrs. Walter R. Stokes yesterday at Manor but the newcomer had consolation in defeat as the defending champion and medalist joined her on the sidelines.

Mrs. Neblett lost out on the nineteenth hole when she boldly attempted to get on the green from the edge of the woods but her club caught in a tree and the ball ricocheted deeper into the woods, allowing Mrs. Stokes to take the match with a bogey five.

Elizabeth Houghton, the defending titlist from Chevy Chase, was a quick victim of Mrs. Betty Meckley, the only former champion remaining who marched in from the twelfth green with a 7 and 6 victory.

Mrs. T. O. Brandon, the medalist and first-round sensation with a victory over Mrs. Leo Walper, lost to the hottest round of the tournament, a birdie-studded exhibition by Mrs. Myron Davy which was worth a 4 and 3 triumph.

Mrs. Peabody Gains Berth

The fourth berth in the semifinals went to Mrs. Hume Peabody with a 1 up triumph over Mrs. H. J. Simons, of the host Manor Club. Mrs. Peabody, who reached the round of four two years ago at Columbia, finds Mrs. Meckley in her path today as Mrs. Davy and Mrs. Stokes meet once again in the other semifinal.

Mrs. Davy, who is destined to come through in this tournament if hours of constant work on her game are to be rewarded, tossed a first nine at Mrs. Brandon which was the outstanding scoring effort of the tournament thus far and which left the latter four down.

Mrs. Davy sank a wedge shot for a birdie deuce on the fifth hole, knocked a second shot stony for a birdie on the seventh and barely missed a hole-in-one with a great long iron on the eighth. The Columbia representative had par for a 77 when the match was over.

Mrs. Neblett Wins Sixteenth

Mrs. Meckley played the woods nine in 40 strokes on Miss Houghton and leading, 5 up, she started back 3-3-3, ending the match with a 12-footer for a birdie on the twelfth hole. Mrs. Peabody held a lead which varied from one to three holes on Mrs. Simons all the way around and it stood up through the eighteenth green as they halved the last two holes.

Mrs. Stokes was plenty glad to win over Mrs. Neblett on the nineteenth for she nearly tossed away the match on the eighteenth after Annapolis, Md., June 4.—Two Naval Academy midshipmen, Joe Hunt and Ellison Wyatt, will fight it out tomorrow for the singles championship of the Third District Intercollegiate Qualifying Tennis Tournament.

In the semifinals today, Hunt beat Southpaw Robert Kerdasha, of Presbyterian College, in a stiff battle, 5—7, 6—0, 7—5, 6—1, while Wyatt conquered Midshipman John Kloter, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

Hunt and Wyatt teamed together to trounce Phillip Burkom and Doyle Royal, of the University of Maryland, 6—2, 6—1, 6—1, in the only doubles match of the day.

The two Middies will play Kerdasha and Fayette White, of Presbyterian, for the doubles title tomorrow.

Regardless of the outcome of the finals tomorrow, Hunt, Wyatt, Kloter and Kerdasha have qualified for the Intercollegiate Singles Championship Tournament to be held June 23-28 at the Merion Cricket Club, Haverford, Pa. Hunt and Wyatt and Kerdasha and White also have won the right to participate in the doubles competition at Haverford.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 4.—The contempt Jack Dempsey held for Jess Willard, before they met, and Jim Corbett is said to have held for the ga-reat Jawn L., before that match, was mild compared to the flip disdain which Billy Conn showed for the titular majesty of Joe Louis, when their June 18 match became legalized yesterday at the New York State Athletic Commission.

CONSIDINE

No one who has ever fought Louis held him as lightly as Conn holds the champ. He blithely ignores the truism that signing to fight Louis does something to men. Most of them enter upon the contract with the grim sobriety of condemned men. Johnny Paychek said he began to see visions of what he was going to do to Louis, shortly after signing the articles, but the visions turned out to be only a harbinger of the stars he eventually saw. Max Schmeling was the coolest of the lot. His perfectly regimented nerves refused to quiver even the night old Tom O'Rourke dropped dead in his dressing room, before the first fight against Louis.

Primo Carnera, oddly enough, was pretty cocky before the Louis fight. Poor simple-minded Primo never knew much about what was going on. He believed, for instance, that he really knocked out most of those early stooges and dry-divers he met.

The loss of his title to Max Baer was a blow to Carnera, but he couldn't picture himself losing to the then rather obscure Louis . . . Until the night of the fight when he grabbed Joe and tried to rough him, and Joe flung the suddenly horrified Primo away from him and staggered the hapless mammoth with a crushing left hook to the mouth.

Max's Fight Ended in Dressing Room

Max Baer talked a good fight against Louis right down to the time a mournful locker-room attendant rapped dolefully on Max's door at the Yankee Stadium, on the night of the fight, and intoned, "It's time, Baer." That was when Max lost . . . not 15 or 20 minutes later.

Buddy Baer was different. He was all quiet resolve. He set his chin, manfully, and said things like "I'll do my level best," a statement which the ballyhooers of the fight turned into, "I'll knock him kicking"—which is just what Buddy did. Tommy Farr talked a lot, but he really didn't know Joe. Bob Pastor spoke plainly and intelligently about his chances of winning. The monosyllabic dopes Louis fought parroted what their managers told them to say about the champ before the fight. The only abusive fellow was Galento. He called our pal Joey a big bum and fervently meant every word of it.

When Conn says he'll poke Louis dizzy he honestly believes that nothing else can happen in the fight. Our study of Billy convinces us that he is incapable of speculating on failure . . . before an act. He is content that Louis is vastly overrated. He laughed the night in St. Louis before the Louis-Musto fight when he tapped Louis meaningfully on the chest and said, "Don't let this clown lick you, Joe. Save yourself for me." But Billy usually laughs, no matter how serious he is. He was genuinely concerned that night. We strongly suspect that there is no shred of doubt in his mind that Louis is just a passing irriation along his path to the title.

Billy's so good-looking and gay outside the ring, and Fancy Dan-like in the ring, that the average fight fan misses the fact that he is one of the toughest young mugs in recent prize-fighting history. Billy's a 10-minute Easter egg. He looks like a dude, but at least he's hard berled as the bloke in Ring Lardner's deathless "champion." He came from a warring, poverty-stricken Irish family that had to clout its way to everything it ever got. Billy's old man still makes news from time to time in barroom brawls, and the only regret Billy himself has about being light heavyweight champion is that he no longer can pick fights in the rough and tumble juke-box joints and take a pop at belligerent drunks.

Billy looks like a grownup choir boy, or a musical comedy juvenile. He had his dazzling white smile turned on the glum and slightly uncomfortable Louis yesterday. But there was no warmth in it. He honestly thinks Louis, as a fighter, smells in spades. Billy doesn't think anybody can fight, except Billy. He says that he'll remain cool, calm and collect on the night of June 18, but those he knew him know also that the words cruel and calumnious might also be added there. Good looking Billy's got that killer-diller in him, the old trace of panther that the mild-mannered Dempsey showed whenever that bell rang. Louis also might as well resign himself to being cursed and insulted more brilliantly by Conn than Joe ever has been assailed, for Conn is the ring's cussing champ, whereas we never heard Joe say anything stronger than darn.

This tremendous cocksureness on Billy's part should make for a good fight, as long as the fight goes. We think that will be around eight rounds and that Conn will win all the way, on superior boxing skill, until his flip disdain for Louis' punching power gets the better of him and Joe cools him quicker than could a ton of dry ice.

West Lanham Midget Racing Speedway Given Preview

Their vests bulging from a luncheon of fried chicken, Smithfield ham and all the trimmings, newsmen and radio sportscasters romped all over the West Lanham Speedway yesterday in a special preview of the site of Washington's second midget auto racing venture.

Following the luncheon given for Auto Racing Director Walter Stebbins by President Edward L. Mahoney, on whose 3000-acre estate the speedway is laid out, the powers that be decided to postpone until June 17 the opening racing card. Original plans called for the quarter-mile track to be thrown open to the public Tuesday night.

Postponement was prompted by the recent heavy rains which have prevented the finishing touches to be put on the $50,000 macadamized track.

The West Lanham Speedway, built without any publicity on Mahoney's picturesque pastures about four miles from the Peace Cross on the Defense Highway, is owned by a group of four men. Mahoney, it is said, possesses the controlling stock interest. The remainder is divided among Vincent Tomkins and Phillips Clarke, local real estate men who are developing property in West Lanham community, and Harry Whelan, a Washington attorney. Tomkins and Clarke are first and second vice presidents, respectively, and Whelan is the secretary-treasurer.

According to Whelan the group first became interested in the possibilities of promoting midget auto racing here two years ago when another corporation struck a financial failure in trying to put over the sport at the Capital City Speedway.

The West Lanham Speedway is described by Director Stebbins, who also is president of the Cedarhurst, Long Island speedway, as "the most modern track of its kind." The two straightways of the oval-shaped track are 230 feet long, which Stebbins said was unusually long, and the track itself is 36 feet wide.

Already constructed are 2,860 reserved seats on the start-finish side of the track, and 3,000 unreserved seats directly opposite.

Capital City League Double-Header Tonight

Garvin's Grill will play the Fat Boy team tonight in a Capital City Softball League game at the Washington Softball Stadium, at 8 o'clock.

In the second game scheduled for 9:15 p. m. the Brooklyn Merchants will engage Pepco in the National City Night League contest.

Charlotte Decker Beats Peggy Smith, Gains Net Semifinals

Mary Belin, Mrs. Rowan Win Doubles

Willie Herbert, Miss Decker Also Score in Doubles At Army-Navy Club

By Jack Munhall

Still running between the rain drops, the City of Washington women's tennis tournament reached the semifinals stage in both singles and doubles yesterday at Army-Navy Country Club with a continued lack of upsets.

Bespectacled, red-haired Charlotte Decker emerged as the fourth singles semifinalist by polishing off her frequent social playmate, Peggy Keyser Smith, in straight sets in a match postponed from Tuesday. Miss Decker, who makes returns with such consistency that her opponents might think they were hitting the ball against a wall, won by scores of 6—4 and 6—2.

In doubles the top-seeded team of Mary Cootes Belin and Frances Rowan paced the advance by beating Margaret Graham and Sarita Peet, 6—1, 6—2. Keeping pace was the No. 2 combination of Willie O'Steen Herbert and Miss Decker, who defeated Eleanor Finckel and Edna Vest, 6—2, 6—3; Sara Moore and Eleanor Fishburn who beat Roselyn Pope and Constance Smith, 6—2, 6—3, and Frances Sturtevant and Jane Wilmerding who eliminated Margaret Graham and Sarita Peet, 6—1, 6—2.

Hard-Fought Games Expected

With the original four seeded players comprising the round of four, today's matches to determine the finalists for Saturday's title encounters both are expected to be hard fought.

Feature attractions will be the meeting between Defending Champion Margo Lee and crafty Mary Cootes Belin, the 1937 and 1939 champion, who was rated the real dark horse of the tournament. The match is to start at 4:15, or 15 minutes after Willie O'Steen Herbert, the former District titleholder, seeking her first crown in this tournament, steps onto the court to play Charlotte Decker.

Mrs. Herbert, slugging the ball with the abandon that marked her domination of District women tennis circles in 1939, will rule a decided favorite over Miss Decker, but picking the Lee-Belin victor is not so easy.

Miss Lee, who hammers the ball with the vigor of a man, will be the choice of the offensive-minded, for she undoubtedly will attempt to carry the battle to Mrs. Belin, who in boxing parlance, is more of a counter-puncher. However, should Miss Lee make many mistakes the result could easily be against her, because the clever and more experienced Mrs. Belin wastes few opportunities.

As for yesterday's matches they were mostly all so one-sided as to be uninteresting. An exception was Miss Decker's victory over Mrs. Smith. Though Miss Decker, the former local playgrounds champion, won by the decisive scores of 6-4 and 6-2, Mrs. Smith actually made the match much closer.

Yesterday's Results

Singles (quarter-finals) — Charlotte Decker (4) defeated Peggy Keyser Smith, 6—4, 6—2.

Doubles (quarter-finals)—Mary Cootes Belin and Frances Rowan (1) defeated Margaret Graham and Sarita Peet, 6—1, 6—2; Willie O'Steen Herbert and Charlotte Decker (2) defeated Eleanor Finckel and Edna Vest, 6—2, 6—3; Frances Sturtevant and Jane Wilmerding defeated Eleanor Voith and Dorette Miller, 6—2, 6—3; Sara Moore and Eleanor Fishburn defeated Roselyn Pope and Constance Smith, 6—1, 6—2.

Today's Schedule

Singles (semifinals), 4 p. m.—Willie O'Steen Herbert vs. Charlotte Decker. 4:15 p. m.—Margo Lee vs. Mary Cootes Belin.

Downpour Halts Ballston Game

A sudden downpour washed out the game between Wilmeth Sidat-Singh's colored Recreation Collegiate All-Stars and Senate Beer, scheduled to be played last night in Ballston Stadium, but Mike Sklar, Merchant's Night Softball League "czar," immediately announced tentative plans to hold the game Saturday night.

Meanwhile, play will be resumed in the Merchant's League tomorrow night, when Plaza Wine and Liquor clash with Manhattan Auto and Radio at 9:15 in the nightcap of a twin bill. In the firstgame, starting at 7:45, International Business Machines will attempt to regain their second place position at the expense of Adam Hats, still seeking their first win after five straight defeats.

leading, two up with three to play. Mrs. Neblett won the sixteenth with a par and the seventeenth with a bogey four when Mrs. Stokes' drive just dribbled off the muddy tee.

The eventual winner, the current Maryland State champion, then flubbed an approach shot to the green on the eighteenth but she chipped close on the next one to gain a halve in fives. On the nineteenth Mrs. Neblett pulled her drive in the edge of the woods while her opponent was down the middle but trapped in two. Here Mrs. Neblett, who said "I never play for halves," attempted to reach the green from the fringe of trees but failed and finally holed out in six.

Today's upper-bracket feature will be the third renewal of the Davy-Stokes rivalry. In 1939 Mrs. Davy won on the fifth extra hole in the District championship while last year Mrs. Stokes avenged the defeat in the Maryland State finals.

Bob Pastor Is Peeved At Stablemate Simon

Fighter Signed for Scott Bout Here Quits Training Camp Because of Abe Simon

Bob Pastor has a mad on at his cumbersome, music-loving stablemate, Abe Simon, and has refused to train with him any further, James Joy Johnston, the old "Boy Bandit," informed Promoter Joe Turner yesterday from the Saratoga Springs, N. Y., headquarters.

James Joy now is in quite a lather, it develops, for young Robert might become so jaded with the whole fight business he will refuse to condescend to go through with the Buddy Scott fight here June 16.

According to J. J., Bob quit working with Simon because he claimed that he, Bob, should have the return bout with Joe Louis instead of Abe. Pastor had been tentatively booked to meet Louis in July on the West Coast before Abe won the date by lasting 13 rounds in Detroit with the Bomber.

Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, however, have Pastor's name on a contract and yesterday were proceeding to draw up a supporting card that probably will furnish more allure than the 10-round feature bout.

Jimmy DeChard, newly turned pro, will fight in the 8-round semifinal, meeting either Jay D. Turner or Babe Ritchie. Turner, who was Louis' sparmate, here recently, and Ritchie, Buddy Baer's sparring partner, fought in a 6-rounder on the Baer-Louis fight, Turner winning a highly unpopular decision.

Kid Tunero, colored Cuban middleweight handled by Johnston, also will appear on the card. Tunero, called the uncrowned champion, defeated Ken Overlin, Marcil Thil and Anton Christoforidis in European bouts. He recently flattened Bill McDowell.

40 Players Still in Running As Post Chess Second Series Ends

Play has ended in the second series of elimination chess tournaments conducted by The Post to determine the winner of a handsome set of hand-carved ivory chessmen costing $250. In the first series of tournaments, played from January 13 through February 28, 68 of the 100 contestants qualified.

As a result of the second series, played from April 7 through June 2, 40 players still have an opportunity to win the coveted trophy. Of these, 19 entrants qualified in both the rapid transit 10-second frays and in the regular tourneys, while 12 qualified only in the regular, and 9 only in the rapid events.

A grand total of 833 games has been played to date, of which 458 were in the slow, and 375 in the rapid style. Total games in the first series was 513, as compared to 320 in the second series. Play is scheduled to resume in the third series in September, with the rapid transit tournaments discontinued.

Games in the Pillsbury Class, last to finish, were played at the Washington Chess Divan, Parkside Hotel. The only three contestants eliminated out of the original field of ten were W. W. Riecks, Dell Floyd and W. E. Keegan.

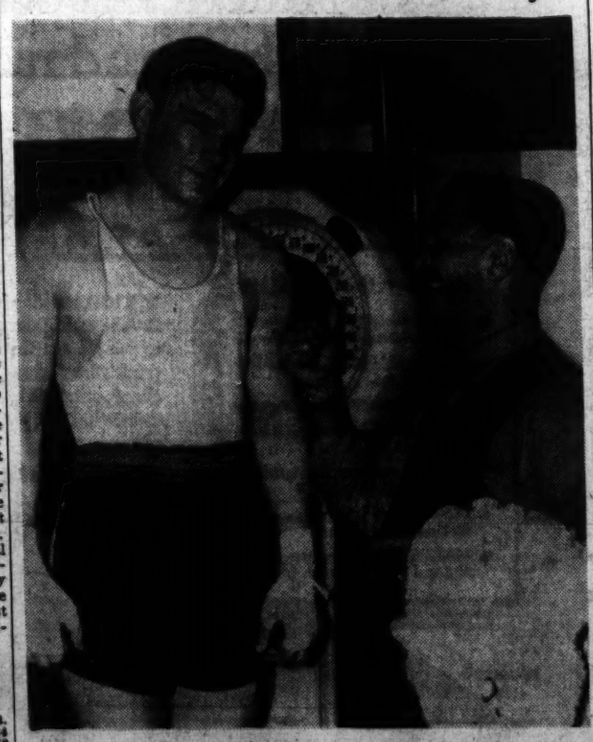
Poll to Determine Basis for "M" Award

Minneapolis, June 4 (AP).—The Minnesota "M" Club has designated the Associated Press annual sports writers' poll as the basis for awarding the new Henry L. Williams national memorial football trophy.

Get Your Foot Off the Scales, Harry



"Figures don't lie," chortles Light Horse Harry Raskin (right) as the scales run up a hefty 190 for Buddy Scott. But somebody should give those scales a saliva test, for Buddy is having a hard time staying over 180 pounds. Scott is working out at Frankie Mann's gymnasium for his 10-round fight with Bob Pastor June 16 in Griffith Stadium

Texas Pros Liked In National Open

45th Annual Tourney Begins Today In Ft. Worth; Hogan, Guldahl Threats

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer

Fort Worth, Tex., June 4.—The principal actors in the forty-fifth U. S. Open Golf Championship went through their final dress rehearsal today at the Colonial Club.

For the last time they could "go up" in their lines without penalty. Starting at 8:15 (C.S.T.) tomorrow morning the real performance will be on and will continue with brief intermissions until the final curtain late Saturday afternoon.

Who the star will be for the 72 holes remains to be seen. It may be a repeat performance for the man who drew the biggest hand a year ago at Cleveland, big Lawson Little, of San Francisco. But local sentiment says it's going to be a Texan, and of the Texans the reigning favorite is Byron Nelson.

Lean, lanky Byron, former Fort Worth caddie, won the 1939 open after a three-way tie with Craig Wood and Denny Shute. He is the "Whirlaway" of the golf course (they used to call him War Admiral, but that's outdated). A cool, calculating customer, he likes nothing better than to come from behind when the pressure is toughest. Featuring accuracy, considerable length and a satisfactory putting touch, he appears particularly adapted to this course.

Rated right up there with Nelson in the bookmakers' listings are: Little, Ben Hogan, another Fort Worth product; Ralph Guldahl, who grew up in Dallas and is shooting for the distinction of being the first three-time winner since Bobby Jones; Houston's Jimmy Demaret, who appears to have regained much of the touch that made him the hot shot of the 1940 winter tour and who shot a 34-36—70 today; Henry Picard, former P. G. A. champ; and Gene Sarazen, one of 13 former winners still in the lists tonight.

Pairings and starting times of the Middle Atlantic entries (first in each threesome):

9:04—Leo Walper, Bethesda; Charles Penna, Medinah, Ill., and *Robert Goldwater, Phoenix, Ariz.

9:53—Lewis Worsham, jr., Burn-Tree; *B. C. Nabers, Baton Rouge, La., and Don Malarkey, Kilgore, Tex.

10:07—Cliff Spencer, East Potomac; *John Burke, Houston, Tex., and Theodore L. Huge, South Euclid, Ohio.

(Fred McLeod, Columbia, C. C. withdrew.)

*Amateur.

Practice scores on Colonial's narrow fairways and numerous doglegs have not been impressive. Subpar rounds can be tolled off on the fingers of both hands. But practice scores always are unreliable; and while admitting freely that the "Death Valley" fifth hole, the infamous 469-yard par 4, is going to take its heavy toll of the 150-odd man starting field, this corner is sticking to its guns and to the belief the 1941 champion will post a 72-hole score better than the present championship record of 281, which Guldahl set at Detroit 4 years ago.

But there is one topic of speculation that, for once, ranks at least on equal terms with the identity of the likely winner. That is the size of the crowds which are going to turn out for this championship, the first ever played in the deep South and first opportunity for Texas to pay homage to its golfing sons.

The gate receipt record for an open championship was set at Interlachen in Minneapolis in 1930. Some $47,000 worth of spectators turned out to see Bobby Jones win his fourth U. S. Open. That figures about 18,000 or 20,000 spectators.

Miss Wright, Jefferies Win In Bowling

Arlington's Wednesday night Mixed Doubles League got under way last night with the duo of Virginia Wright and Bill Jefferies winning all three from Leon Fleisher and Ruth Clark, posting a score of 658 to 595 for the latter. Ruth Price and Bob Boyer had high set of 668 in winning three straight from Emma Jane Bressler and Charlie Munson. Lillian Copeland rolled high individual set for the women of 318 with Al Wright taking the honors for the men with his 360.

The Arlington Summer Commercial League again brought out Wilson Havener, Heflin Plumbers, as top man for the night with his 146 high single and 368 set which made it possible for his quintet to win team highs with 574 and 1,600 and take two games from Arlington Fire Department No. 1.

SILVER SPRING

Hilda Wolfe, member of the Cabbages team in the Vegetable Mixed League at Silver Spring, showed the other pinwomen how to get nice scores for she totaled 134-333 to set the pace. George Allen, Potatoes, had high single of 145 and a near high set of 376, but was unable to help his team from losing all three to the Radishes with C. Pryor's 371 and Bob Burnette's 358 sparking the wins. Andy Gleeson, Tomatoes, had a 142 near high game and top set of 387, but the Beans took the odd game.

has lost $300,000 in the six years it has been operating the club, but they are getting scant sympathy from the other clubs. Anything that would hasten the Browns' owners in any attempt to seek another site for the club would be joyfully received. Poverty may drive them to that end quicker than any other means.

Two years ago, the Browns actually were being subsidized by the other American League clubs in the hope that they could assemble a team that might stimulate some baseball interest in St. Louis. It was all very hushed. Two per cent of the receipts in all other cities was set aside as money to be funded the Browns for pay roll expenses and player purchases, but it proved no remedy. St. Louis refused to turn out for the Browns' games, and the league stopped the subsidies.

Connie Mack, who didn't like the idea of the league supporting the Browns, finally demanded that the subsidies stop. Said Mack: "I've lost my shirt at different times trying to make a go of it with the Athletics. If the Browns' owners can't help themselves, make them sell out or move the club to a town that will support it."

Pennington, Huntt Pigeons Win Two Long-Distance Races

Two prominent local homing pigeon fanciers, William R. Pennington and Riley A. Huntt, demonstrated over the past rainy weekend that they had lost none of their skill in conditioning birds for long and difficult flying tasks when their respective flyers each won long-distance races.

In the first instance, in a race from Nappanee, Ind., 507 miles airline to this city, Pennington's entry not only won the race but was the only entrant of 70 choice birds belonging to 12 members of the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club to arrive home at the close of the second day after liberation. The winner was timed at 4:31 p. m. on the second afternoon, liberation having been made at 5:15 a. m. the previous morning. With this victory the Pennington Loft has now amassed the imposing record of producing 19 500-mile race winners since 1918, 13 from Nappanee, Ind. To win a single 500-mile race is the goal of every homing pigeon fancier.

In the other event, Huntt's champion pigeon, a 5-year-old blue hen, demonstrated her worth when she won the 600-mile race from LaGrange, Ga., sponsored by the National Capital Racing Pigeon Concourse Association, winning the race by one hour over the nearest competitor. There were only two birds home at the end of the second day.

Mr. Huntt's champion, in the same race last year, won first prize by two hours.

Numa, Hornet Waltz Tonight At Rassles

Leo Numa, who as Axel Anderson used to plow through football lines as fullback at the University of Washington, will attempt to tear The Green Hornet to pieces tonight at Turner's Arena.

Numa made a big hit last Thursday when he won from Milo Steinborn, and so impressive was his performance that Promoter Turner elevated him to a starring role for tonight's bit of groan artistry. If Numa fails tonight, Turner is expected to relegate him to the lower ranks; but victory will mean a future shot at either Ray Steele, the National Wrestling Association king, or Bronko Nagurski, the one-time titleholder.

Lou Plummer, villain from Baltimore, victor last week over another erstwhile football star, Len Macaluso, will meet Fred (Legs) Grobmier in the semiwindup.

Abie Coleman, the gnome, will scrap with Angelo Leone; Henry Kulkovich will tackle Steinborn and Maurice LaChappelle will battle Ace Freeman.

Buddy Lewis got a cheap single on a ball that bounced over First Baseman McQuinn's head, and Case reached third as Pofah scored. Travis' fly to right fetched Case home.

Anderson pitched a run right back to the Browns. He flung a double to Berardino and walked Ferrell. With two out he walked McQuinn purposely to fill the bases and then walked Laabs unpurposely to force a run across.

Bloodworth's sixth-inning homer rearranged the score to read 4-2 in favor of the Nats and the Browns made it 4-3 in their half of the inning. Grace singled, Ferrell walked again, they both moved up on a wild pitch and Pinch Hitter Bobby Estalella got one run home with a high-bounding single to Travis.

Then came the Browns seventh, and here are the horible things that happened:

Anderson walked McQuinn. Laabs popped up. Cullenbine grounded to Archie, who pulled Pofahl off second base with a wild throw in an attempted force play on McQuinn, and both runners were safe. Clift singled to left, and McQuinn scored, with Cullenbine reaching third and the batter galloping to second on Case's throw to the wrong base. With the score thus tied, Grace was walked, filling the bases and bringing Berardino to bat.

Berardino hit a line drive to left and the speedy Case mangled it. He dashed in, stood stock still, and then permitted the ball to bound past him for a three-bagger that cleared the bases.

Nothing was important after that.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, June 4.—Rolling Road's soggy fairways were no handicap to silver-haired Al Houghton, Beaver Dam pro, yesterday afternoon in the Maryland State pro-am tourney. Al fashioned himself a neat 32, 34—66 to break Cliff Spencer's course record and take first money in the pro sweepstakes.

Four strokes behind in second place was Ralph Beach, of Suburban. Beach and his partner, Arnold Litman, had a best ball of 62 to tie with Houghton and Jesse Baggett for the lead in this division. Second place in the best ball competition went to Houghton and Dick Millbourn with a 63.

Houghton's record-breaking performance consisted of 12 pars, 5 birdies and one bogey. On the par 4 sixteenth, his putt lipped the cup and failed to drop for the only misplay in the round.

Houghton's card:

J. Hal Scores Second Straight Victory at Charles Town

4-Year-Old Wins Over Muddy Oval

Maeside Is Second And Royal Business Third; Winner Pays $6.40 Price

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 4.—J. Hal furthered his claim to the mud-running championship of this West Virginia track today when he turned in his second straight victory over a deep track. The 4-year-old son of Mate and Parley again led almost every step of the way, this time at a mile and one-eighth in the feature event named the Williamsport Handicap. Two lengths behind the handy winner came Mrs. G. H. Pearce's Maeside to be second a half-length in advance of Col. Ewart Johnston's Royal Business.

A co-favorite with Royal Business during most of the betting, J. Hal paid a $6.40 mutuel in winning his third purse of the meeting for R. C. Waple, Falls Church realtor. His time for the route was 1:59 4-5.

As if the farmers hereabouts had not had enough rain, there was a downpour of near-cloudburst proportions early this morning that left the track a mass of mud and water. However the hazardous conditions did not keep the riders from kicking all the way. Royal Business for the second time failed in the mud. Her handlers changed from Palumbo to Jockey George Napier, but this did not help her. She was well placed early but simply failed to rally.

Jockey Buddy Root had the mount on J. Hal and he soon shook off Big Jack to take a clear lead and it was a case of trying to catch him the remainder of the distance. There were no catchers in the field today. Maeside made the boldest bid by saving ground but Jockey Danny Scocca couldn't make the colt gain after getting to midstretch. But Root already was taking up on the winner.

Those who held the lucky tickets on the daily double collected at the rate of $70.80 for each $2 investment. Silver Beam, owned by J. V. Stewart, was the winner of the second race.

The third race went to C. Gibtons' Noon Step.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

The track was a canal yesterday as the program began. For a while it looked as if the jockeys were going to have to take out fishing licenses. Some one suggested that races be called off to let the horses bob for apples. When Clymene was beaten the other day I let out a loud squawk. I even beefed so loud that Tom Lewis and Galt Davis heard me and I want to apologize to them. Clymene is in the entries for today. She's far down the list, but she will be right there knocking if they put her in action. However, I'd like to wait for a mile and a sixteenth the last part of the week. Two friends of mine were going to fly to Belmont Park yesterday to play a certain horse. The planes were grounded, so they came to Charles Town instead. They both went home big winners and the horse they were going to play in New York was an also ran. W. C. Waple tells us that Berwyn struck herself in that recent race and will be on the shelf for a couple of weeks. The Charles Town jitterbug championship goes to Mr. and Mrs. Herman Summers without a dissenting vote. They hail Fairmont, W. Va. Jockey F. Woodstock took no chances with Noon Step yesterday. With the colt five lengths ahead he was still driving at the wire. However, it was a good idea. At any rate, he wasn't going to be caught asleep. Jockey Danny Socca is riding in excellent form. I believe I wrote once that all he needed was a chance on some good horses. They tell me there is a goood filly in Berryville named Santi Rene. Victor P. Noyes was here and said He Rolls would start in the $10,000 Kent Derby at Delaware Park on June 14. Apprentice E. Renshaw left yesterday for Delaware Park. Trainers are sometimes blamed for the poor showing of horses when the fault is not with the conditioning. For instance, Tom Lewis could not get Lackawanna close in Florida last winter. The big horse was left at the post. The answer is that the bell on the starting gate at Hialeah rang before the doors opened. Lackawnna tried to start when the bell rang. He bruised his head badly against the gate and thereafter he ducked every time he heard the bell ring. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—CHIEF TEDDY has been showing steady improvement and is ready to defeat a field of this sort. Goes coupled with the Bennings Stable's CAP'S QUEEN but the latter is a very doubtful starter. HAPPY SLAVE was carried wide last out. MAIDEN FERN has speed.

Second race—SATIN ROYCE seems to have the edge on these. Likes the short route and I'm going to string along. HAPPY HOSTESS will have her race track and will be right there. BUDDY AL for the show end.

Third race—CANROCK was second last out and appears to have enough speed to down this kind over a rough track. DONA MONTEZ will like the going and is better than that last. CATS CRADLE figures close with these.

Fourth race—WANDERING HERO appears the best of those gathered for this 7-furlong event. Should make the most of the rail position. STAR CANTER was shuffled back early last out and should be close today. GRADATIM for the minor award.

Fifth race — SCHLEY BUCK promises to go well in this. Needs only the right ride. WALE SIGNAL is at top shape and will be a keen factor. MEADOW GOLD and GAY FRANK have early speed.

Sixth race—CLAY HILL is the solid horse in this field. Gets in with steadying weight and I see no reason for mistakes. ENGLE'S WONDER has defeated slightly cheaper company. TANTRUM is in light.

Seventh race—HIGH AIM made a half dozen moves last out. With better racing luck this one should take it all. LUCRE LUDE'S last was a gallant try. BROOKE HEROD for the third money.

Eighth race—PETEE LAD and YANKEE LAD are a tight fit in the day's finale. I prefer them in the order named. MOON HARVEST has got to be better than that last outing.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take SCHLEY AL, COCKLEBUR and SPOUT RUN.

Best bet—CLAY HILL.

Connely Asks Centralized 'War Board'

Emmett F. Connely, president of the Investment Bankers Association, yesterday recommended the establishment of a War Industries Board "under one man who knows production" as part of a program for businessmen to follow as the best means of winning the battle of production.

Speaking before the National-American Wholesale Lumber Association's annual convention here, Mr. Connely said that he was "an unswerving advocate of the immediate establishment of a War Industries Board. Ample evidence exists of the overnight change that took place in the spring of 1918 when coordinated management was supplied.

"What greater immediate blow could we deal the dictators—what greater encouragement could we give the brave people of Britain now and in the months ahead—how could we better bring about national unity in this country than by the immediate acceptance of such coordinated direction?

"It would be a boom to the defenders of democracy all over the globe," he added.

Mr. Connely praised the Office of Production Management "for doing a really remarkable job," but added that "it is no secret in Washington that there is a tremendous amount of lost motion. A central board should be put in charge of the entire program with full and complete authority vested in one man who knows production."

The Investment Bankers Association spokesman called for financing of the defense program on a "pay as you go" method as far as possible, but called for a more "realistic" approach to the tax problem, by government experts.

He said production of peace-time goods should be encouraged where it did not conflict with defense production, urged that there should be as little as possible Government interference with productive machinery and suggested that the Government cease spending on non-defense projects during the emergency.

Outing Committees Named

William N. Payne, jr., president of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League, has appointed C. Gay Harrell, of the Columbia Federal Savings and Loan Association as chairman of the golf committee for the annual outing at the Washington Golf and Country Club on June 18.

The outing committee now includes Chapin B. Bauman, prizes; John J. Kolb, refreshments. Carl J. Bergman, arrangements; Wilfred H. Blanz, entertainment, and E. J. Carlson, swimming. About 150 are expected to attend.

The outturn was reported as a preliminary figure, due to holiday conditions. Increase over the 1940 output was 17 per cent.

'Invisible' Ration Cards Seen for U. S.

The pattern of events in the United States thus far as concerns the European war bears a remarkable resemblance to those evolved by this country in the first World War, editors of the Commodity Year Book say in the 1941 edition, out yesterday.

"Step by step," the editors said, "we appear to be following the trail blazed in 1917-18. The priority system of today, the trend toward price fixing, the controls over foreign trade, the pleas that non-defense industries turn to plastics and other substitutes; all these bear the familiar ring of World War years."

The editors said that "invisible ration cards" would be distributed to every man, woman and child in the United States in the next few weeks as a result of President Roosevelt's proclamation of an unlimited national emergency.

The book listed among future developments to expect, in addition to stronger rationing of raw materials, tightening control of labor, capital, production facilities, transportation and fuel supplies.

Cons. Aircraft Votes Dividend Of $2 a Share

San Diego, Calif., June 4 (AP).—Consolidated Aircraft Corporation directors declared a $2 dividend on the company's common stock, payable June 30 to stockholders of record June 16.

The regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents per share on the convertible $3 preferred stock also was declared, payable the same date.

To provide the financial structure for handling tremendously increased defense contracts, the board called a meeting of stockholders to consider an increase of the authorized common stock from 1,200,000 to 2,400,000 shares.

As a second step in changing the financial structure, the board voted to call outstanding convertible $3 preferred stock on 60 days' notice at its call price of $55 per share.

A new $226,000,000 contract for Consolidated B-24 bombers, awarded by the War Department yesterday, brings the present Consolidated backlog to approximately $684,000,000. Contracts awarded Consolidated during the past two weeks aggregate $389,000,000.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 4 (AP).—Early wheat price gains of as much as 1½ cents were lost in the final hour today after the market's rise from Saturday's low point had been extended to more than 6 cents a bushel.

This represented practically an uninterrupted advance since producer approval of the Government's marketing quota system. At highs of 99½ for July delivery and $1.50 for September, within about 2 cents of the season's peaks, the market ran into profit taking sales, hedging and liquidation inspired partly by weakness of soybeans and corn, which reflected improved moisture conditions.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¾ lower, compared with yesterday; July, 97⅞-97¾; September, 99-99½; Corn, ¼-½ down; July, 73¾; September, 74¾; oats, unchanged to ⅛ up; soybeans, 1½-1¾ lower; rye, unchanged to ¼ higher and lard, 5-10 higher.

Oats continued to be strengthened by indications that considerable acreage has been abandoned. Four crop experts yesterday estimated oats production at 1,088,000,000 bushels, compared with 1,236,000,000 last year.

List Swings Forward for Third Day; Aircraft, Coal Stocks Lead Advance

New York, June 4.—Stocks extended their rising movement to three sessions today, getting an upward thrust from aircraft and other defense industries. Steel stocks generally failed of their accustomed bellwether role, shifting trends uneasily throughout the day. Their place of action was usurped shortly before the close by a group of coal mining shares.

The Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks gained .1 of a point at 40.2 Turnover totaled 426,035 shares compared with 417,940 yesterday, itself the best day since May 21.

Continued prophecies of a fuel oil shortage in the East this coming winter, due to lack of ocean tankers, resulted in the rise of coal shares, since the East may have to do more heating with anthracite than in recent years.

Issues of Consolation Coal and Lehigh Valley Coal, both common and preferred, reached new 1941 highs.

Savage Arms, also hitting a high, was a steady gainer throughout the session. Plans for doubling the outstanding common stock of Consolidated Aircraft kept that issue in the minus column until the last few minutes of trading, when it spurted to another 1941 high, up ⅛ point from yesterday.

Included in the list of gainers at the end were Boeing, Douglas, United Aircraft, Caterpillar, Bethleham, American Telephone, Dow Chemical, Dupont and Standard Oil of Indiana. On the downside were Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber, Cerro de Pasco, Santa Fe, and Standard Oil (N. J.).

In the Curb, were 85,000 shares changed hands compared with 89,000 yesterday, advances were recorded for Aluminium, Ltd., Celanese Participating preferred, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Gulf Oil.

Domestic rails and utilities and a group of foreign bonds displayed moderate rising power today. Other sections of the list were hesitant and activity limited.

Chief highlight of the session came in the final hour when tremendous activity developed in German government and municipal issues which gave rise to many rumors on the floor of the stock exchange.

Some said buyers were acting on the belief a peace proposal was in the wind; others said there was a sizable block of German obligations owned by American capital being liquidated by holders who believed war between Germany and this country sooner or later would break out. When these bonds began to appear, they said, speculators and others bought for a quick turn on the theory the peace rumors would create buying interest.

The German government 5½s ended up ⅜ at 7⅝ on turnover of $465,000, par value. The stamped 7s were unchanged at 9½ and Prussia 6s were up 2 at 17. Japanese and Italian loans likewise were mostly improved but trading was only moderate.

Silesian - American Corp. 7s jumped 18 points to 85 on top of Tuesday's 12 point gain. The issue is due in August. The corporation has all its assets in Germany or occupied Poland.

After the market closed the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., which controls the corporation through a holding company, said in a statement that "certain negotiations" have been going on and if successfully completed would make provision for the payment of the issue when it matures.

Domestic issues closing higher included Anaconda Copper 4½s at 105, Illinois Central 4¾s at 46⅝, International Merchantile Marine 6s at 83½, Missouri Pacific 5s at 22½ and Pacific Telephone 3¼s at 108½.

146 Graduates Get Diplomas At Bliss School

One hundred and forty-six graduates of the Bliss Electrical School, Takoma Park, Md., received their diplomas last night at commencement exercises in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, Washington.

The Rev. Peter Marshall, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, in the commencement address, told the graduates that "everything is in such a state of change that the only way to face the future is to go out in faith." He said: "Only as we are going out within the will of God can we go out without fear."

A farewell address was given by Louis Denton Bliss, president of the school, who also presented the diplomas, assisted by Charles F. Ferry, chairman of the theoretical department. Graduates were announced by Eugene W. Bond, secretary of the school.

House Group Seeks Another Police Force

To Washington's four police departments whose conflicting authority and responsibility has brought reform demands from Congressional and civic leaders, the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee yesterday proposed to add a force of 900 building guards.

The committee favorably reported a bill to give the guards which constitute the second largest uniformed force in the city, authority and duties identical to those of the Metropolitan and Park Police. Provision also was made for increase of guard salaries a total of $197,920 a year.

The measure, passed by the House last session but not acted upon by the Senate, would set up in the District five police departments with virtually coequal authority, including the White House and Capitol police.

Its approval by the committee recalled that Representative Stephen Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, is expected shortly to introduce a measure intended to end confusion of police jurisdictions in Washington by placing all police here under a single command.

The bill would change the name of the guard force to that of United States Building Police, but would confine its jurisdiction and policing power to 130 buildings under the supervision of the Federal Works Agency.

Annual salaries for members of the force would be:

For chief inspector, $3,500 to $4,000 a year; for inspector, $2,700 to $3,100; fire maarshal, $2,800 to $3,200; assistant fire marshal, $2,300 to $2,700; investigators, $2,300 to $2,700; captains, $2,300 to $2,700; lieutenants, $1,900 to $2,300; sergeant, $1,700 to $2,100; private, $1,500 to $1,900.

Present salaries range from $1,200 for privates to $2,300 in the higher grades.

Contract Bridge

A contributor, H. M. S., jr., asks about a point on play. He writes: "I am puzzled as to the proper safety play to avoid the loss of more than one trick with this holding:

Declarer

SOUTH

Dummy

"This was the trump suit and I led the queen from dummy, losing to the king on my left and subsequently lost to the jack, also on my left, on a second finesse. What is the proper percentage method of playing this combination?"

Experts would do not better with this holding than contributor H. M. S., jr., as the recommended method of play is to "Lead low toward ace, nine; finesse the nine. If it doses to the jack, next lead the queen and finesse." Our contributor friend was unlucky to find both the king and the jack on his left.

It will be pretty generally agreed around these parts tonight that it's the greatest city in the world that is getting a deserved tribute on one of the Nation's most popular radio programs.

For the city that is being saluted and having all sorts of compliments paid to its charms on "Major Bowes' Amateur Hour" which you'll hear over WJSV at 8 p. m. is that currently very popular town known as Washington, D. C.

The Major will have dozens of nice things to say about it and, even if you knew them all the time, they'll bear repitition. Then, since the secret seems to have leaked out a little beforehand, Washington's civic leaders will reply to the tributes with telegrams which the Major will read over the air.

As is usual when the Major salutes one of the Nation's leading cities part of the amateur talent on the show will represent Washington and Washingtonians will have the opportunity to cast their votes for the most popular amateur act by calling the special telephone number set up for the purpose in Washington. It will be REpublic 7711.

It should make the Chamber of Commerce pretty happy to know that all the while the Major is saying those nice things about Washington practically half the adult population of the United States will be listening. The latest survey set the audience at 37,401,000 persons.

Arthur James, Rail Magnate, Is Dead at 74

By the Associated Press

New York, June 4.—Arthur Curtiss James, 74, one of the 12 richest men in America, died today of pneumonia in Harkness Pavilion, 20 days after his wife's death.

James, who inherited copper, silver and gold mines and railroad securities from his grandfather and father, used his wealth to purchase more railroad stock until he was reputed to hold more railroad securities than any other man in the country.

His investments at one time were estimated at $350,000,000 in approximately 40,000 miles of railroad.

While the largest individual holder of Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad shares, James purchased control of the Western Pacific in 1926 which, with the Missouri Pacific, jointly controlled the Denver & Rio Grande.

He was an ardent yachtsman and twice circled the globe in his squared-rigged Aloha. He was commodore of the New York Yacht Club in 1909 and 1910.

While he and his wife were active socially, entertaining in their home on Park Avenue and at their Newport, R. I., estate, James was not prominent in public life.

Known as a stanch Republican, he announced his support of Alfred E. Smith for President in 1938, however, and was chairman of the Independent committee for election of Franklin D. Roosevelt as Governor of New York the same year.

A rugged, vigorous man, 6 feet tall, James was known for his love of flowers. Bedrooms in his Park Avenue house opened on a central hothouse filled with orchids.

His grandfather was Daniel James, who founded the Phelps-Dodge Corporation, great mining concern, in 1828, and it was with that concern that he became associated upon his graduation from Amherst College in 1889. His father was D. Willis James who was associated with James J. Hill in rail development of the Northwest.

Housing Site Approved

Approval of a defense housing site at Norfolk, Va., to provide 300 homes for families of Negro workers employed at the navy yard was announced yesterday by the Federal Works Agency.
